CITY COUNCIL IS WASTING NO TIME

The way the city council is pushing the preliminary work upon the new municipal water system is worthy of commendation. The contracts for actual construction should be let and work begun on the pipe line from the mountains by mid-summer, which would mean the completion of the system by the first of the coming year.

A supply of pure mountain water will add more to the material growth and prosperity of Eugene than any other single project or enterprise now in prospect.

MR. WU SAYE HE DID NOT START BOYCOTT

That adroit and picturesque Oriental, Wu Ting Fang, Chinese minister at Washington, has lost no time in getting into the limelight again, comments the San Diego Union. As of yore, he neglects no opportunity to speak at public functions. However, it is pleasing to note that he has made a better selection of topics than he did formerly. It used to be his custom to inveigh publicly against the exclusion of his countrymen. Possibly he received a hint when he was reappointed to Washington that he would better not resume his campaign against one of this country's wholesome laws. In any event, so far as known, he has not been riding that hobby of late. At present Mr. Wu's chief desire seems to be to remove an impression, quite prevalent in the United States, that he was largely responsible for the recent Chinese boycott against American goods. At a banquet in New York last week he used this rather emphatic language on the subject:

"It was alleged that I started the boycott, or if not that I inspired it. I cannot understand how this absurd rumor originated, but once it was given out it was copied in many newspapers, and even some of my friends in America wrote to me suggesting that I had something to do yith it. I can say that it was one of the most malicious libels that could be invented against a person, as it had not the least foundation. The boycott was started in Shanghai and in the south of China ,while I was one of the ministers in the Wai-Wu-Pu (the foreign office) at Pekin, and I and my colleagues were doing all we could to stop the agitation. To blame me that I was in any way responsible for the carrying out of the boycott is just like accusing a judge, who tried a person charged with an offense, of abetting the person in its commission."

PLANS FOR SCHOOLS TO TEACH JOURNALISM

In the "University Journal" Joseph S. Auerbach, in the May number of the North American Review, expatiates upon the plan of the North American Review for the establishment of professional schools of journalism in our seats of learning. Mr. Auerbach says:

"Already in our larger universities there are maintained publications which are mainly newspapers in name and which are frequently profitable to the students conducting them, although they have few, if any, general news items. Their advertisements merely testify to the heroic efforts on the part of relatives or friends of the management in securing their insertion. Chronicling, as they do only the engagements of students in the athletic field and in the classroom, they are like the Gazette of Oxford, that lays no claim to being anything more than it really is. In a certain sense, therefore, the proposed university journal would be the outcome or evolution of the present daily.

"At the outset it is necessary to recall Mr. Harvey's idea, that for the supervisory heads of such a university journal there should be selected an experienced editor-in-chief and a managing editor, contributing little or nothing, but in the main censoring the contributions of the students.

"With them could be associated a sufficiently large number of associate editors in order that all of the time of any one student need not be taken from his other duties, and that abundant opportunity might also be afforded them to write with care, and after reflection. Some students from time to time might be called upon to do reportorial work in a neighboring city, though doubtless not a great amount of effort in this direction need be expended. Editors are not necessarily made out of reporters, any more than good lawyers out of stenographers, or even routine clerks."

Ex-Govenor Bates talked to the young men of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association law school the other evening and warned them to keep out of politics if they wanted to succeed in law, says the Newburyport (Conn.) News. This may be good advice so far as the connection between law and politics is concerned, but we know of many men who have been able to make a success in both lines. We dislike to see strong public men advising young men not to enter politics. The campaigns need every able and honest young man that can be induced to enter politics and work for that which is right and for the welfare of the state. Governor Bates is rather a conspicuous example of what can be done in politics if one has the ability to get along, and while all may not be governors of the state, the young men can perform a service for the people with their fresh impulses and eagerness to accomplish something that shall be worth while.

The postoffice department takes the position that freedom of the press does not mean freedom of the mails. But what is freedom of the mails? It is a new term. Who shall say what constitutes freedom of the mails? The Woodland Democrat thinks it looks very much like a judicial question, but the postmaster-general, as an executive officer, feels no hesitancy in deciding it. In our anxiety to squelch pestiferous anarchists we must not forget that our constitutional right to free speech is closely allied to freedom of the mails, and in submitting to the curtailment of one we may be laying the groundwork for suppressing the most valued adjuncts of liberty—free speech and a free press.

"Three-cent" Johnson has justified the faith of his followers by winning, after seven years of almost constant fighting, three-cent car fare for the people of Cleveland. Tom has been called a demagogue, and may be one, but other cities would welcome one of the same kind.

Times change and we change with them. The sawdust that once figured in the green-goods game is now, thanks to clever and liberal advertiseming, figuring as health-giving breakfast food. Old Barnum had the game sized up correctly.

Strange that there should be any doubt about what Taft is going to the isthmus for, when everybody ought to know that he is going after the delegation from the state of Panama. But for goodness sake don't say we told you.

It is said that there is a bottle of brandy more than one hundred years old in the cornerstone of a Jersey courthouse, and there is little wonder that some of the citizens are advocating tearing it down, remarks an exchange.

Bishop Parot, of Baltimore, told the women of his fashionable church that the rich and costly dresses were out of place in church, and it's a good guess that if those women had their way a bishop would be out of a place.

Gee! But those Independence Leaguers were going some when they put the mantle of Abraham Lincoln on the shoulders of William Randolph Hearst.

Even if another run for the "old ticket" has been fully determined on, it's the "one best bet" that the country would not get the first news of it from Nick Longworth.

HUNTING CONDORS IN CALIFORNIA.

Among birds threatened with extinction is the condor of California, a very rare species long hunted on account of its plumage and becoming rarer every year. Before long the condor will be harder to find than the epyornis of Madagascar and the dodo. Its eggs are very rare and are valued at from $250 to $300, not to speak of the risks run in securing them. William L. Finley, president of the Oregon Audubon society, has had many thrilling experiences in the San Bernardino mountains studying the condor at close range and photographing the birds. In this picture the scientist and his assistant are shown climbing to a dizzy height to capture a young condor.

THERE WITH THE FRONT.

No matter how harshly the Fates treated Bill—
He was there with the front—
When his pockets were empty, his stomach felt ill—
He was there with the front.
When he hadn't a cent in this wide world to spend—
When his finish loomed up with an indigo blend—
When he went out to "touch" forty bones from a friend—
He was there with the front.

When Bill came to die—and he knew it was so—
He was there with the front.
He had made it a part of his nature, you know—
This having a front.
Now Bill warn't a saint by an awful long shot—
But arriving up there where the angels allot,
I'll bet everything in the world I have got
He got in on his front.

—Nashville Tennessean.

PLEASANT HILL ITEMS

(Special Correspondence.)

Pleasant Hill, May 7.—Rain is of great value to farmers. Corn planting is nearly finished, and grain and gardens doing well.

Mrs. Loren Scrivener and little daughter, of Springfield, have been spending the past week at the home of Mrs. Scrivener's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McKenzie.

Baseball is receiving the usual amount of attention, two nines playing regularly. Some of the best players in the county live here.

J. M. Cornelius and family left yesterday for their home five miles east of Albany.

C.C. Mulkey and family left Sunday for Truckee, Cal., expecting to be gone all summer. They will be in the employ of the Diamond Match Company.

Ansel Jacobs and family have moved into the Ellis Callison residence where they will reside for the winter.

T. G. Hendricks, of Eugene, was a visitor at Mrs. Lucetta Baughman's yesterday.

Mrs. Kate Baskett, of Salem, a pioneer of '45, is here visiting her sister, Aunt Polly Callison, aged 87. These two with one brother, Henry, [illegible] are the only remaining children of Elijah Bristow, first settler [illegible].

It is to be hoped enough money will be raised to purchase a suitable fence for the cemetery, something better than common field fencing.

The annual Pleasant Hill picnic will be held June 6th, and the proceeds used for the benefit of the Sunday school.

A number of Santa Clara young people will give an entertainment here on the evening of May 9, consisting of a drama entitled "Mr. Thornkin's Hired Man," and several musical selections. There will be a quartette, a double quartette, college quartet, and other interesting features such as the Santa Clara people are sure to furnish. Come out and hear them and encourage home talent.
