DIVINITY SCHOOL'S NAME CHANGED TO BIBLE UNIVERSITY

SCOPE OF WORK WILL BE ENLARGED NEXT YEAR—COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES BEGIN WITH BACCALAUREATE SERMON NEXT SUNDAY MORNING

The board of regents of the Eugene Divinity School has changed the name of the institution to the Eugene Bible University, and the articles of incorporation have been amended so that the scope and work of the school is enlarged. The institution has been steadily growing since its organization, over twelve years ago, and it has been deemed advisable to add other departments and to increase the number of instructors. When the new term begins in September there will be several additional members of the faculty, and new departments will have been added by that time. The new stone building, now in course of erection, will be ready for occupancy then and there will be facilities to handle a much larger number of students than at present. There are 53 students in the Divinity School proper at the present time and the total enrollment, including those in the school of music, the school of oratory, and the preparatory department, is 125. The school had only four students the first year of its existence.

Commencement Exercises. The commencement exercises of the school will begin next Sunday, May 17, with the baccalaureate sermon, which will be delivered by Rev. C. Hilton, of Milton, Oregon. The program for Sunday and the day following is as follows: Sunday, May 17, a. m. Opening exercises. Baccalaureate sermon, Rev. C. Hilton, Milton. Song. Ordination service, directed by Rev. J. S. McCallum. Benediction. Commencement, May 18, 8:00 p. m. Music. Prayer. Solo, Professor Jesse Davis. Address, President P. L. Campbell. Special song, E. D. S. chorus. Address before the graduating class, Morton L. Gregory, Walla Walla. Conferring of degrees, President E. C. Sanderson. Song. Benediction. Sunday evening the service at the Christian church will be in charge of graduates of the school. David E. Olson and Nathan E. Beach will deliver the sermons. The class of 1908 consists of the following: Ernest C. Wigmore and David E. Olson, in the classical biblical course, and Anna A. Harden and Nathan Earl Beach in the English ministerial course.

SECOND DAY OF GOVERNORS' CONFERENCE (Continued from Page One.) The fear is expressed in many sections that the power has been already pretty well taken up. Many of these filings are for purely speculative purposes; others are for future development; but comparatively few of them are actually being used or in process of preparation for utilization. The fear is becoming prevalent that the acquisition of these water rights by private persons or corporations will lead to monopolies and over-capitalization, and that in this way these great and most important natural resources will not be at the chief disposal of the people. The action of the United States government, however, in regulating the use of the stream, ought to prevent an absolute and oppressive monopolization of them. As the coal and petroleum production both decrease, the absolute need of the preservation, conservation and protection from monopoly of the water power in the country will become, and is becoming, more and more apparent.

Stock Growers' Views. Discussing the grazing problem in the Southwest, a problem resulting from the wasteful methods of the early settlers, H. A. Jastro, president of the American National Livestock Association, said the cattlemen are at last aroused to the fact that better methods must be found or their business will be ruined. Some plan of government control, however, would be necessary in order to secure stockmen a permanency in their business which they do not now, nor can they ever enjoy under our present land laws. Mr. Jastro advocated as a remedy for the evil which menaces an industry valued at $100,000,000 the system of management under which public lands withdrawn for purposes of forest protection are now being restored to their former splendid condition.

The manner in which these forest lands have been handled, the methods by which, while still furnishing almost its full amount of grazing, they have been re-seeded and are again assuming their old-time condition, declared Mr. Jastro, points out in a most convincing and unanswerable way the course to take if saved and made a source of value to the people and the country in general. While recognizing the fact that the prevailing methods, if persisted in, will eventually destroy the grazing interests in California, Arizona and New Mexico, many of the stockmen are not ready, etc. Other Addresses. Dr. I. C. Wright, professor of geology in the University of West Virginia, added expert knowledge and prediction on the subject of coal and iron, in which he predicted the exhaustion of the Pittsburgh coal supply in 93 years, and the West Virginia fields in practically the same time. John Mitchell, ex-president of the United Mineworkers of America, estimated that fully 25 per cent of the coal in the mines already developed had been wasted in mining, and a much greater percentage in use. Without such waste, which he believed might be overcome, the supply of coal would last 2000, instead of 200 years, as predicted.

Takes Issue With Carnegie. Governor Johnson, of Minnesota, made a lively talk, in which he took issue with Mr. Carnegie's statement that wasteful methods prevailed in iron mining in the Lake Superior region, and cheerfully assured that gentleman that "Mr. Hill will be glad to take issue with him on some things." John Hayes Hammond, who has the reputation of being the highest-paid mining engineer in the country, read a paper on engineering methods, in which he drew the conclusion that, while there was no way to revolutionize mining methods, they might be improved gradually.
