YEARS TO RECOVER FROM DISASTER

I would regard an adverse vote upon the pending University appropriation bill as a disaster from which the state would require years to recover. The commonwealth of this time appears to be upon the eve of a development now too long delayed. It is seeking capital and population from those sections of the country where enterprise and education obtain, and once let the word go forth that the people of Oregon have deliberately refused to sustain her chief educational institution and at once the tide of immigration beginning to move toward us will surely be diverted elsewhere.

STEPHEN A. LOWELL, Pendleton, Oregon.

AGRICULTURAL PAPER FOR STATE UNIVERSITY

The Oregon Agriculturist and Rural Northwest, the leading farm paper of the state, is pronounced in its support of the State University appropriation. In the latest issue its leading editorial says:

"We hope the farmers of Oregon will stand by the appropriation for the State University, because we have observed that the states which have made the greatest progress and have the best schools of every kind are those which provide liberally for the whole system from the foundation up. We would like to see Oregon do as well proportionately for its state university as the states of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota do for their state universities, and while thinking about this it is well to remember that the three states mentioned, which are famous for their great and liberally supported state universities, are also noted for having taken the lead in agricultural education. We must have university-educated men in Oregon, and the question is whether we will have a university at home which will permit persons of moderate means in this state to obtain such an education, or whether the doors to a university education shall be closed to all except those who are wealthy enough to attend distant state universities or those like Chicago university and Stanford, which have been endowed with funds wrong from the people by methods which few now have the hardihood to pronounce moral."

THE BUSINESS VIEW OF GREAT CONFERENCE

The conference of governors of the states and territories of the Union, which President Roosevelt has called together and which met at the White House this week, was an assembly unique alike in object and constitution.

Never before had the executive heads of all the commonwealths of the Union met in Washington or elsewhere for any purpose, and never before had a conference representing every section of the country as this did, been officially called together for the purpose of arriving at a comprehensive program for the conservation of the national resources. Thus the conference was an epoch-making event in a double sense and naturally the proceedings of the sessions in the Senate East room were watched with the keenest interest by Americans of all degrees and sections.

This sense was worth commemorating when the chief executives of the world's greatest federation faced for the first time in history the chief executives of its forty-six constituent states, all met together to consult on ways of keeping for future Americans the heritage of natural resources, which have made America her present place of wealth and power. There were many other distinguished delegates present, among them representatives of all the important national organizations of one kind and another, the welfare of which depends upon national resources.

Yesterday's special dispatches to The Guard from Washington brought the good news that Eugene's postoffice appropriation had been increased by $20,000, making $70,000 in all. This sum should be sufficient to erect a creditable building, although it should have been at least $100,000. Quite likely there will now be considerable delay in beginning construction work, owing to the fact that new plans will be required, calling for new bids. As reported exclusively in The Guard, when the bids were opened on the 9th of this month, only one offer to erect the building was received, that of a Salem contractor, who overbid the government estimate by several thousand dollars. Local contractors, who might have bid, after examining the plans, realized that they could not keep within the limit, and passed it up. With the increased appropriation it is likely that satisfactory bids will be received when they are again called for.

The San Francisco Bulletin is authority for the statement that, after the Panama canal is completed, the naval base of the United States will be in the Pacific instead of the Atlantic ocean. According to the Bulletin the rendezvous point will be Magdalena bay, which is most centrally located. There will then be sixteen battleships in the Pacific squadron, and sixteen in the Atlantic. It is more than likely, however, that the Bulletin article is simply a dream of some reporter. Magdalena bay does not belong to the United States and thus far it has not been possible to secure the right from the Mexican government to establish even a coaling station there.

The paper trust is a good trust—to some people. In his testimony before the congressional committee John H. Norris, of the American Newspaper Association, testified that Hearst, the publisher, has been getting paper from the trust at prices ranging from $1.22 to $1.25 per hundred pounds, which is much below the rates charged newspaper publishers in general. This statement sheds some light on the painful silence the Hearst newspapers have maintained when the paper trust has been up for discussion, in the opinion of an exchange.

Almost every newspaper in the state is supporting the University appropriation, a fact that shows the press may be relied upon to do the right thing at the right time. Furthermore, the papers are doing this work, filling many columns with sound argument on the subject, with out compensation or hope of reward except that which comes from the enhanced welfare of the state in which all will share alike.

A large number of applications have been received by the United States treasury from persons who, after reading in the newspapers that the receipts from the country was $45,25, wanted to go there to see it. It is not surprising that they would give the order to march up.

When Governor Lincoln's "Kansas cannot make effective its law aimed at the manufacturers of liquor without the aid of the federal government, he federal a good-saber-for discussion to the prohibitionists and extreme state's rights, as much may be said on both sides of it."

Professor Jenks, of Cornell University, nat of the horse marines, will get on Andy Carnegie's black list if he persists in talking of the steel trust as the greatest example of "a watered stock corporation," even if it is just that.

The granaries have gone bare after the most successful winter season in their history. They are plowed with Eugene and its people, and a majority of them declare the State University is all right and worthy of the support it is asking.

Althany papers have been talking a good deal about the fine railroad every section of the country as this did, been officially called together for the purpose of arriving at a comprehensive program for the conservation of the national resources. Thus the conference was an epoch-making event in a double sense and naturally the proceedings of the sessions in the Senate East room were watched with the keenest interest by Americans of all degrees and sections.

This sense was worth commemorating when the chief executives of the world's greatest federation faced for the first time in history the chief executives of its forty-six constituent states, all met together to consult on

RICHARD STRAUS, WHO IS COMING TO AMERICA.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable reception accorded to "Salome" when the opera was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House two years ago New York probably will have a further opportunity to pass judgment upon it next season. Oscar Hammerstein has announced that he will produce the piece at the Manhattan Opera House and that he has engaged Richard Straus, its famous composer, to conduct the performances.

failed to interest European capital, Japanese financiers are now in this country, trying to negotiate a loan.

May 23 would be a fitting day for congress to skiddoo, though its significance may cause the leaders to choose a later day for adjournment.

Orators in congress are strong on the past and future, but ridiculously weak on the now, though it is on the latter that public interest is focused.

That governors' conference at the White House will go down in history as a notable gathering of politicians that was free from politics.

Still, the Falton men seem to be able to make both the Bourne and Cake factions sit up and take notice—and then some.

The farmers are too busy watching the growing of record-breaking crops to pay much attention to the festive candidate.

UNFURL THE FLAG.

Unfurl the flag! let the winds career And lift it in rippling loveliness Over all the wild west-world we claim By cross and sword and in Freedom's name. From the peaks that gleam o'er Alaskan gloom To the isles of palm and shores of bloom; From the sacred rock where the seed was sown To the sunset ranges where the flower has blown, O, the flag of the Union, toss and wave! O'er millions of tremen and not a slave.

(Unfurl the flag! let it curl and kiss The rosy lips that faint in the sun; It was born in storm, and its glory sprang Where the hills of the battle shrieked and sang; Through smoke and cloud it has won the right To float and flaunt when the days are bright. We know what souls in its white stars shine, And the blood on its crimson spilled like wine; We know the strife and the woes and tears That bedred it around for a hundred years. —Sam L. Simpson.

AT THE COMEDY.

Last night, in snowy gown and glove I saw you watch the play Where each mock hero won his love In the old unlovely way.

("And, oh, was life their little scope Where love so smoothly ran, How different, dear, this world had been Since this old world began.")

For you, who saw them early with Hot hand and heart away, Knew well where went the mock-ery.

That foolish little play. ("It looks well all—if love were all." The girls alluded and cried Then love was best what's or better a low, low, the lines replied.)

And you, last night, did you forget, So far from me, we hear? For watching there your eyes were wet With just an idle tear?

(And down the great dark curtain fell Then, their foolish play, But you and I know—Oh, too well! Life went another way! —Arthur Stringer.
