"I believe the University appropriation will carry by 20,000 majority, and I hope it will. We want to build up a great University here where we may educate our sons and daughters without sending them outside the state."
JOHN M. GEARIN,
Ex-United States Senator.

POLITICAL ADDRESSES OF MARKED CONTRAST

There was a great contrast between the speeches of Governor Chamberlain and Senator Gearin at the theatre last night. The latter's remarks were of the character one might expect from a man who was recognized as the peer of any senator on the floor, the fitting representative of the great and growing state of Oregon. His speech was not made up of cheap clap-trap bids for votes from an audience whose intelligence he underrated, but was a fair, manly discussion of the campaign issues from his political viewpoint. It was such an address as commands the respect of the oppositon and raises the speaker in the general estimation.

Senator Gearin's pride in the state of which he is a native was shown in his splendid endorsement of the University. There was no reservation, not the slightest qualification of any kind, in his declaration that Oregon's university should receive the financial support that will in time make it at least the equal of any institution of learning in the country. This ringing declaration was in efect the sharpest condemnation that could be uttered against the course of a governor who would divert an uncalled for and unexpected blow at this same institution, in the hope that certain non-progressive elements, lacking state pride and devoid of ambition for themselves or their children, would applaud the act and reward him with their votes in a future campaign.

John M. Gearin was the logical Democratic candidate for senator at this time, but having received an appointment at the hands of the governor, and possessing the measure of gratitude that is so rare in political life, he stood aside in order that Mr. Chamberlain might make the race, which gives especial promise of a successful outcome, because of bitter internicine strife in the dominant party, and the popular distrust engendered by the failure of the Republican leaders to accept fully and honestly the provisions of the primary law, especially that portion relating to the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

GOULD'S PROJECT MAY HURRY OREGON EASTERN

The news comes from Los Angeles that a member of the Gould family has given out the information that the Western Pacific railroad will be extended north through California and Eastern Oregon, across the mountains into the Willamette valley and on to Portland. That such a plan was entertained has been known for several years, ever since the extension of the Western Pacific from Salt Lake City to San Francisco was announced, but this is the first official announcement relating to it that has been made. Many lines have been run northward from California and Nevada and the newspapers in the intermountain region have repeatedly forecasted a route for the Gould line which is practically the same as that which Edwin Gould now says will be followed. Evidently these plans have been formulating for years and have at last reached the point where publicity cannot interfere with their consummation.

The interesting feature of this news, aside from the fact that it portends great activity in railroad construction on the Pacific coast in the near future, is the feeling it will probably hurry Harriman up in the matter of the construction of the Oregon Eastern, which will make Eugene the most important railroad centre in the Pacific Northwest. This will of itself be of sufficient importance from a commercial significance to case the building up here of a city, second to none in the West with the exception of the three or four leading seacoast cities.

EVANS' PEACE TALK

Without at all denying the occasional usefulness of lawmakers and diplomats, a measure of approval may be given to the sentiment recently expressed by Rear Admiral Evans and given in the following words:

"We will always have war as long as we have anything worth while to fight over, and the more battleships and the fewer statesmen we have the longer we will have peace."

The Los Angeles Express thinks the opinion of the admiral somewhat subordinates the idea of a big navy as the genuine peacemaker, but in the final analysis the point becomes most prominent, particularly when taken in connection with the influence which the world-circling cruise of the fleet is having on other nations. Thus an American recently returned from Russia says European opinion regards the sending of the fleet to the Pacific as the greatest diplomatic move of the century. Russians and others now believe the peace of the world is assured, and with the voyage ended they believe the friction which has developed between the United States and Japan will be dissipated.

The fleet question, or the program for naval expansion, therefore, is not one to be settled by American statesmen or even American public opinion just at present. The verdict must be rendered after the effect upon other nations has been observed and fully considered. It seems Europe is talking of world peace and the voyage of the "big sixteen" is not half completed.

There will be fewer straight tickets voted in Lane county than ever before. In fact, throughout the entire country party lines are all but obliterated, and it is quite certain that if the best men do not generally win out, at least the most popular nominees will, and that, too, regardless of the party which has chosen them as candidates. At last the people, and not party bosses, seem to be in complete control of the political machinery.

The New York Tribune announces that a crop of potatoes will be grown this year on public lands valued at $1,000,000 an acre. The tract comprises a portion of the playgrounds of Central park, in that big commercial city. That decision was reached after the commissioners had consulted with the secretary of agriculture on what to plant to help fertilize the soil.

Chauncey M. Depew says "the senate's utterances on financial and industrial questions are read with very little credence." Depends on the utterer, Chauncey. There are senators who are known to be biased on these subjects.

Because a congressional committee is "convinced" that there has been no corrupt submarine lobbying is no reason that the public should take the same view.

While there is room for much doubt of the value of submarines in war, as money-sinkers in times of peace they are the goods.

CANDIDATES WHO ARE STRONG WITH PEOPLE

The Democratic county campaign is being aggressively waged in every precinct, the party's ticket for county officers being unusually strong and popular this year.

For sheriff, Harry Bown is gaining friends every day by his quiet, clean methods of campaigning, and the further fact that his qualifications and experience especially fit him for the duties of the office. From all sections of the country comes the report that he will run far ahead of the party vote.

Henry Stewart is well qualified for the office of county clerk and has a host of friends who have known him from boyhood, and who want to see him elected. These workers are not confined to any party and their efforts are sure to bear results.

For county judge John W. Baker is actively campaigning with excellent prospects of leading at the polls. He is especially strong in Southern Lane, having the confidence of the people [illegible] he resides, but has [illegible] supporters in all parts of the county.

Wells [illegible] is a [illegible] who is making a splendid [illegible] [illegible] among the [illegible] He is a [illegible] began his active campaign.

THE COUNTESS OF WARWICK.

Ohio and the middle west are to have several opportunities to see and hear the Countess of Warwick during the coming presidential campaign, for she is to take the stump actively in the cause of socialism. It was reported that Mrs. Longworth, the president's daughter, would also be heard in the campaign, but this was promptly denied. Lady Warwick is an excellent and convincing speaker and is most earnest in the cause she represents.

young farmer of intelligence, education and industry, and would fill the important office of assessor with a conscientious sense of duty to all classes of taxpayers. A cleaner, more capable or deserving candidate for office was never offered to the voters of Lane county, and that they intend to give him hearty support at the polls goes without saying. His support will not be confined within party lines.

WHAT THE BRAKEMAN SAID.

The shades of night were falling fast
As through the railroad car there passed
A brakeman with a visage red,
And this is what he loudly said:
"B-r-r——————glb."

His hair was short, his jaw was long,
His lungs were leathery and strong,
And as we sped the landscape o'er,
Once more he gave this awful roar;
"B-r-r——————glb.",

"Oh, say," remarked an ancient Miss,
"And tell me, please, what town is this?"
The brakeman rolled his honest eye,
Likewise his quid, and made reply:
"B-r-r——————glb."

"I'm bound for Niles," the drummer said,
"Is this the town that lies ahead?"
The brakeman sighed with weary air,
And once again we hear this blare:
"B-r-r——————glb."

Then up we rose and madly hurled,
That brakeman forth into the world,
And as he fell with anger vain,
We heard again the wild refrain:
"B-r-r——————glb."

Next morn they found him as he lay
And planted him without delay,
And now they've got another cuss
Who calls the town and calls it thus;
"Biz-z-zzjkghttx."
—St. Louis Times.

THERE LITTLE GIRL DON'T CRY!

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your doll, I know,
And your tea-set blue,
And your play-house, too,
Are the things of that long ago;
But the childish troubles will soon pass by—
There, little girl, don't cry!

There, little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your slate, I know;
And the glad wide ways
Of your school-girl days
Are the things of that long ago;
But the life and love will soon come by—
There, little girl, don't cry!

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your heart, I know
And the rainbow gleams
Of your youthful dreams
Are the things of the long ago;
But the heaven holds all for which you sigh—
There, little girl, don't cry!
—James Whitcomb Riley.
