PORTLAND ASKS FOR ROSES FROM UNIVERSITY CITY

Portland has come nobly to the rescue of the state of Oregon, as well as to Eugene, in her support of the U. of O. appropriation bill. And Portland has asked Eugene to send her flowers to help make her rose carnival a success. In recognition of her noble work The Commercial Club of this city requests every lady in this city who has roses to cut them and bring them to the Commercial Club, where a committee of the ladies' auxiliary club will properly pack them for shipment to Portland. Let Eugene show by her generous shipment of roses that we appreciate her help. If any lady can cut flowers, but is unable to get them to the club rooms, by telephoning me at the Eugene Flouring Mills I will have them sent for.

C. S. WILLIAMS, Pres. Com. Club.

(Every rose in Eugene ought to be sent to Portland if they want them there. Their splendid vote for the University down there deserves our everlasting gratitude.—Ed. Guard.)

CITY NEWS

The people of East Eugene will hold a praise service tonight at the Fairmount church to celebrate the victory of prohibition.

So far as unofficial returns have been received, Lane county is "dry" by 490, and the University appropriation is 1700 ahead.

The old front of Day & Henderson's furniture store is being torn out and will be replaced by the modern plate glass front which Mr. Day will put in.

The roof of the new depot is about completed. Work is being rushed on the interior of the building, but it is doubtful if it will be completed by commencement time, as planned.

W. O. Heckart has the contract for building the foundation of the Mitchell & Garrett two-story brick building. He will begin the work as soon as possible.

A marriage license was granted by the county clerk today to Madison Curtis Harris, aged 31 years, and Miss Vera Margaret Wilson, aged 25, both of Eugene. The wedding occurs this evening.

Word has been received here from Seattle that J. W. White, the Eugene merchant who went to that city to see the battleship fleet, is quite sick there from pneumonia. He is said to be in a bad condition.

Among the carload shipments into Eugene this morning were one of building materials for the new depot, one of all for the Standard Oil Company, and five of gravel for the new depot yard improvement.

L. F. Wooley brought the ballot box down from West Cottage Grove today. He says the count in that precinct was not completed until 6 o'clock this morning. The largest vote in the history of the town was cast at this election.

V. J. Emerick and C. H. Snyder, of Medford, and Harry Pellett, of Ashland, passed through Eugene this forenoon in a big Corbin automobile on their way to Portland, where they will take in the rose festival and return home in the same manner in which they are going. They started from Medford Monday forenoon and have taken their time on the road. After stopping up with gasoline, they proceeded on their trip. Their big machine attracted considerable attention on Willamette street.

THE MAN WITH THE RED BEARD.

It was in the wildest part of New Mexico during the latest part of that region's history that a powerfully built man with a red beard and steel gray eye was walking along the main street of a town. Hearing a step behind him, he turned quickly, drawing his revolver at the same moment. A greaser was about to plunge ten inches of steel into the red bearded man's back, but the latter was too quick for him and dropped the knife with a pistol ball, covering the hand with blood.

In a moment the street was full of greasers. They seemed to pop up from every corner. They surrounded the man with the red beard, knocked him down and had the life nearly kicked out of him when the sheriff came along and took him to jail. There he was in the hands of greasers, who put him in irons and tortured him in every possible way for three weeks, then, getting tired of him, turned him loose.

The red bearded man wandered northward—less, arms and head in bandages—till he met a circus. To the manager he said:

"Goin' south?"
"Reckon."
"Stop at G.?"
"Yes, G.'s on the date book."
"Want a hand?"
"We need one or two more men to put up and take down the tents."
"I'm with you."

The red bearded man worked well, notwithstanding his bruises. The circus men called him Redbeard. They found it necessary to stand together while in that region, and the shout "Hey, Rubel!" was frequently given. When some one of their number was attacked by greasers he would give the cry, and every circus man would at once lay about him, breaking as many bones of male citizens as possible.

There were an afternoon and an evening performance at G. The evening show was crowded with greasers, about every person in the town being on hand. During the day Redbeard had collected a lot of stakes and poles of various kinds and piled them outside of the main tent. He was not observed saying much of anything to his comrades, nor did they say much to each other or any one else. There was that dogged look on their faces that portended a storm. Among the audience was the greaser who had tried to knife the red bearded man and several men who had tortured him while he was in jail. He spotted them.

The show was over, and the audience was leaving the tent when Redbeard, his beard looking redder than ever in the big light that illuminated it and his steely eye darting fire, leaped upon the pile of improvised weapons he had collected and, filling his lungs with air, gave one long wild shout:

"Hey, Rubel!"
Every man connected with the circus made a dash for the pile. There were tentmen in ordinary apparel, there were ostlers in high boots, there were negro minstrels in burnt cork and there were riders in spangled tights. Every man of them seized his cudgel, swung it in the air and brought it down on the nearest greaser. The women and children scurried away like hens and chickens to coop through a storm of wind and hail and lightning. Some of the greasers had their knives and pistols with them, but they had no opportunity to get together to make a united fight. Wherever they attempted to strike they were beaten down by a shower of oaken stakes.

Redbeard seemed to be saving himself for special objects. The first of his old enemies he espied dodging about in the melee was the sheriff who had arrested him. Redbeard made a dive for him, swung his club high in the air and brought it down on the man's skull. He sank like a steer in a slaughter house. Then came the turn of the greaser who had attempted the knife. Redbeard found him on the ground where he had just fallen, tripped in the melee, and jumped upon him with a pair of boots alone heavy enough to stun him. In another moment the greaser's head was a jelly. Lastly, Redbeard attended to his jailers. One he held on a flaming torch used to light a peanut stand. Another he poked with an iron pointed stake. His thirst for revenge was unsatisfied till he had settled his account with every one of them.

When the affray was over there were a score of bodies on the ground, all of them greasers, either dead or badly wounded. There were others who had either been carried away or had been able to drag themselves off the field. The remainder had fled ignominiously. The manager, realizing that the affair was an unusual one, acted accordingly. He did not fear a rally that night, but he dared not go farther south to return through G. To return by any other route was impracticable, so he concluded to go directly northward.

Before dawn everything was packed in the wagons and the show turned away from the scene of Redbeard's vengeance. The men of the company formed a rear guard under the direction of Redbeard, who as a fighting man had won their entire confidence. They were followed for a short distance by a few greasers, but so few that, realizing the futility of interfering with the retreat, they soon gave it up and returned to G.

As to Redbeard, as soon as there was no longer use for his military service he left the company to go no one knew where. Since the fight creases have not yet been smoothed out of the region, the greaser of those parts as the two show boys said:

"Hey, Rubel!"

RESIDENCE AT CRESWELL BURNED THIS MORNING

The residence of Ed Moore at Creswell was burned to the ground this morning between 8 and 9 o'clock. The interior of the building was being repaired. The painters put a bucket of paint on the stove to warm and it became so hot that it boiled over, the oil in the paint igniting from the flames in the stove. None of the contents of the building except an organ, a couch, a few chairs and some minor articles were saved. There is no fire fighting apparatus at Creswell so the citizens formed a bucket brigade, but they could do nothing to save the building. The house was built last fall at a cost of about $2500. It was two stories high and contained nine rooms.
