

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

Disease prevailing in this... Many sudden deaths are caused by heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves will become inflamed and waste away cell by cell. Kidney troubles almost always result in a permanent impairment of the kidneys and are obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling that you can make no mistake by using Dr. Kilmner's Swamp-Root, the kidney, liver and bladder remedy, it is a pleasant to take and is the highest for its wonderful effects in the most distressing cases. A CASE OF ARSON AT THE GRAND

One of the pictures at the Grand tonight looks so near like the real thing that an announcement has to be made to the audience before it is shown on the screen not to get scared as there is not the least bit of danger. The title of it is "A Case of Arson," and in it a good portion of a town is burned over and nearly a hundred shots are exchanged between the outlaws and the enraged citizens. The entire program will be found in another column, and will run for three nights, with a change Thursday night. All seats 10 cents.

The Cutest Yankee Soldier

By MITCHEL FAY.

THE CUTEST Yankee soldier I ever knew, said the Confederate veteran, was a fellow who came down to stay on us. Talk about eels. This man was slipper than any eel that ever wriggled through five fingers. And the gall he had! A mouse at the end of a rope didn't seem to have any terrors for him. We'd take him, he'd escape, and instead of getting back into his own lines he'd go on springing. He wouldn't go back to the commander who sent him until he'd finished his job and got all the information he wanted.

Our trouble was that we were in the field, where we hadn't any jail to put him in. The first time we caught him red handed, with memoranda of our forces on him, the guard was dead tired after a twenty-four hour march and went to sleep. To get away that time was easy. We caught him and shut him up in a box car on the railroad track. He sawed a hole in the bottom of the car, let himself down and got past the guard in the darkness.

Well, we caught him again, though this time he tried hard enough to make his lines, and I wanted to string him right up. The colonel came pretty near giving me an order to do so, but concluded that he'd better get the general's order, and this necessitated our keeping him overnight. This time we decided to put him in a farmhouse. We put a guard in the room with him and a double guard on the outside of the house.

The Yank, besides being slick, was the best looking chap you ever saw in your life, and he had such a pleasant smile that I hated the fun of putting an end to it. There was a half crown girl in the house, an awkward, freckled, red headed thing that none of us noticed or considered any element of danger. How the spy found a way of getting her interested in him or whether she did it all without the asking we never found out. She ran into the room where he was and excitedly told the sentry that the Yanks were coming full tilt. The guard ran out, and when he found it was only a scare and went back the prisoner wasn't there. He got away through a secret tunnel the farmer had dug.

He was a beautiful runner—we had had experience in that—and an artful dodger besides, but he had little start, and we felt no fear of not catching him. Just as we were starting in different directions a man told us of some blood-hounds near by, so we got 'em, and they picked up the scent. We didn't hurry much as soon as we found we could get the dogs, or rather, the man I sent for 'em was a long while getting 'em, and I reckon the Yank had got about forty minutes' start; but, Lord, that wasn't anything since he was more than twenty miles from his lines, and we felt dead sure of getting him.

TOLD THE SENTRY YANKS WERE COMING.

The dogs kept the scent for about a mile, when they lost it at a creek. The Yank had walked in the water some distance, and then, instead of getting back to dry land on the opposite side, he crossed farther up. This threw the dogs off the scent for quite awhile.

The first we heard of our man he'd taken a horse out of a widow's barn. We followed him through a clump of bushes where there was a store and learned that he'd gone into the store, told the storekeeper that he was a Confederate courier in a hurry with important dispatches, helped himself to what he could find to eat and asked the storekeeper if he had any red pepper, as he was mighty fond of it on meat. The storekeeper gave him a box, and the Yank jumped on his horse and galloped away.

Funny, wasn't it—a man flying from the rope so particular about the seasoning of his food? By this time we'd tracked him some ten miles, and he was going straight in the direction of the Federal lines, but his horse didn't seem to be much of a beast for endurance, for we kept hearing of the man nearer and nearer. When about two miles ahead of us he left the road and made for a big field, letting down a rail fence to get into it. He soon struck the road again, and it was evident that he'd made a cutoff. Then we followed him up a creek that was pretty near dry and at last came to his horse, lying stone dead in a cotton field.

"Hoora!" we all shouted. "We've got him! Another mile or two 'll do the business." But he'd been riding all the while.

must have been as fresh as a daisy for running. Anyway, he gave us a lively chase.

First we came upon him, that had doubtless been knocked off by a branch, and he hadn't lost time in picking it up. Some of our men had forced him to exchange a pair of worn-out shoes for his boots, and pretty soon we found blood in his tracks. We calculated we were not half a mile behind him, and it was still five miles to the nearest Federal pick-et. The blood tracks grew more and more and it was plain that he couldn't run very fast with bleeding feet.

All of a sudden the foremost dog, skipping along with his nose to the ground, stopped and sneezed. The next and the next did the same till every dog was sneezing so hard we were afraid they'd sneezed their heads off. The Yank had poured red pepper in his shoes, in which there were plenty of holes, through which it could run out into his tracks. The dogs sneezed and sneezed and then turned tail on the trail. No whipping would drive them on. Some of us followed the Yank, but we didn't get him. The last we saw of him he was scooting into the Federal lines.

What did we do with the girl who helped him get away? Nothing. And I've been glad ever since we didn't. The Yank came back after the war and married her. They're living in the house from which she helped him to escape. They've got a dozen or more grandchildren.
