CAREER OF GROVER RECALLED BY ELECTION

The election of Governor Chamberlain to the United States senate next January in the middle of his term has an exact counterpart in the career of Governor Grover, says the Pendleton Tribune.

At the June election in 187 0a Republican governor was succeeded by Lafayette Grover, a Democrat, who had already served in the state constitutional convention in 1857, and later in the lower house of congress. Governor Grover was re-elected in 1874, and during the regular legislative session in September, 1876, in the middle of his second term, was chosen United States senator. He resigned his position as governor in the following February and took his seat in the senate the 4th of March.

This experience of Governor Grover will be followed by Governor Chamberlain, with the exception that Grover was chosen by a caucus of his party in the legislature, while Chamberlain has been selected by the Republicans of the state, although a Democrat, at a general election.

Governor Grover was born in Maine on November 29, 1823; went to California in search of gold in 1850; came to Oregon the next year, and at once entered the strenuous political life which characterized the young territory in the "halcyon days" of Bush, Nesmith, Harding, Williams and their associates.

Ex-Governor Grover still lives in retirement in Portland at the advanced age of 85 years.

Since Governor George E. Chamberlain has received the popular vote of Oregon for the United States senate, speculation as to the political changes and history which this election will make in the state are now in order, says the East Oregonian.

The constitution of the state provides that in case of death, removal, resignation or disability of the governor the duties of that office shall fall upon the secretary of state.

Consequently, when Governor Chamberlain resigns as governor, which he will not do, perhaps, until after the legislature ratifies his election, Frank W. Benson, the present secretary of state of Oregon, will become governor and serve until December 21, 1910, the date at which Governor Chamberlain's term would have expired had he remained to the end of his term.

In the meantime, in November, 1910, another governor will have been elected, the date of the state election having been changed from June to November.

The story is going the rounds of the state press that the recall, adopted at the recent election, will be invoked against the Statement No. 1 members of the legislature in Lane county. Should this be done it means another election in a short time—and nothing is more popular with the American citizen than an election, if we except the national game of baseball. Under the new crazy-quilt constitution of Oregon we can unloosen things at any time by holding a special election to recall some poor office holder who happens to have incurred the displeasure of a few of his constituents. The initiative and referendum seem right in principle, but in practice are productive of much expense and trouble, while there is no excuse on earth for the recall with the short official terms that we have in this country. If put into actual practice there will be an end of trouble and ill feeling over its application. It will be used simply as a means to satisfy spite and inflict revenge.

Location work has again been resumed on the Oregon Eastern and The Guard believes, as it has frequently stated, that this will be the first Harriman line of importance upon which construction work will be begun in Oregon. There is reason to believe it will be completed ahead of the Drain-Marshfield branch, because of its greater strategic importance on the railroad chessboard. Its building will mean that Eugene will become one of the leading interior cities of the West and an important jobbing and manufacturing centre.

At the meeting of the Commercial Club last night Judge Potter suggested the advisability of having a general clean-up day prior to the annual University commencement. The suggestion is a good one, and we trust that Mayor Matlock will act favorably upon the request of the club in this respect and proclaim a day for cleaning up the city, not the least important of the work being the cutting of the grass and weeds along the streets in the residence districts.

A friend suggests to the editor that Chamberlain was elected because the people have formed the habit of voting for him, just as they have become accustomed to endorse pretty nearly every new scheme of government proposed by the radical reformers, like the recall, for instance. For the same reason woman's suffrage was defeated, the voters having cast their ballots so often against it that they could not break an old habit.

It may be wisdom to always have a purpose, but in selecting your purpose it may be well to bear in mind that the less it clashes with the purposes of others the more likely you are to attain it. In other words, it's always easiest to advance along the line of least resistance.

A scientist is trying to frighten the English suffragists by telling them that insanity always follows such movements. Most people on this side believe that insanity preceded many of their capers.

If there is any truth in published convention prices, Denver must be figuring, not only on getting that $100,000 donation back, but on making a profit of several hundred per cent besides.

According to late statistics, London has 26 paupers for every thousand of population. Wonder what is the percentage of poets, artists, and literary geniuses among those paupers?

Keep up the civic improvement spirit in Eugene. Money spent for good streets and sidewalks is well invested and will bring many-fold returns.

If all the gentlemen announced as having been chosen to make the Taft nominating speech should try to speak at the same time there would be something doing in the [illegible]

PIERS OF THE NEW MANHATTAN BRIDGE.

When the new Manhattan bridge across the East river, New York, is completed, there will be four bridges between Manhattan and Brooklyn, which, with the tunnels and ferries, will solve the bridge crush problem for many years to come. The Manhattan bridge is of a different type from the Williamsburg and the old Brooklyn bridges, as will be noted from the form of steel piers now almost finished. The structure will be far more graceful in appearance than the others and will comprise the latest novelties in bridge construction.

DREAM STUFF AND SOUL STUFF.

We are such stuff
As dreams are made of, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.

All of us, young or old, rich or poor—all of us have our dreams, and these dreams are not all of sleep. The best of all our dreams are the day dreams.

To the young these dreams come like a glittering pageant of beauty—castles in Spain—seen through the ever shifting kaleidoscope of early hopes and aspirations.

"Alas that dreams are only dreams; that fancy cannot give a lasting beauty to those forms that scarce a moment live."

With the years comes disillusion. The mirages rise. The rivers of fancy lose their runnels in the sands of life's desert places. The feathery palm trees of the distance fade away. The castles in Spain disappear like an unsubstantial fabric.

But we must not cease to dream—

Because our life is such stuff as dreams are made of, because life in its fullness of [illegible] is in the reaching always after our ideals, because a soul without [illegible] is dead.

[illegible]

[illegible] The ideal is the mental conception of something supremely good, supremely to be desired. He dreams of what ought to be and finds realization and happiness in striving after his ideal. His dreams may not come wholly true, but if he has seen his vision and pondered it and been dominated by it he will find partial realization, and in finding a part of his dream he finds his happiness.

Those who never dream are not so. They go to their work like slaves whipped to their tasks. Life has no spontaneity. There are no cultivations in their life, and they constantly ask themselves whether life is worth the while. The man who has no vision has no abundance, no fullness of life. He is already dead.

Therefore, my brethren, let us go on dreaming the beautiful dreams. Some sweet day we shall wake up and find them all come true. Let us dream

Because dream stuff put into terms of action [illegible] is soul stuff!

When You're Safe.

"Hinnessy," said Mr. Dooley, "this is great talkin' about Christian Science, hey?"

"Yes," said Hennessy, "and what do you think about it?"

"Well," said Mr. Dooley, "I think that if the Christian Scientists had a little more science and the doctors had a little more Christianity, it wouldn't make any difference which you called in—if you had a good nurse."

Barber (insinuatingly) — "Your hair wants cutting badly, sir."
