CIRCUIT COURT GRINDS AWAY ON CRIMINAL BUSINESS

ANDY GRAHAM, OF COTTAGE GROVE, FINED A HUNDRED FOR PERMITTING GAMBLING—JONES, TWILLEY AND CRAIG PLEAD NOT GUILTY—GRAND JURY CHOSEN

The regular term of circuit court convened this forenoon with Judge Harris on the bench. After the roll of jurors was called the following grand jury was chosen to enquire into the several criminal cases: David M. Purkerson, T. P. Schenck, B. G. Crow, J. D. Cochran, S. T. Baker, H. and 1000 members from all over the state. The local Masons are very much elated over the fact that Eugene is to entertain them.

Edwin C. Ward, who resides about seven miles west of Eugene, is completing a neat four-room cottage near the home of his parents. He was married to Miss Zelma Bond a day or two ago. As soon as their cottage is finished they will move into it.

Saturday afternoon Dr. Prentice removed from one of George Midgeley's hands a walnut splinter which he had carried for over 20 years. It never gave him any trouble until recently, and thinking it might result seriously, he decided to have it cut out.

Sid Smith and Karl King played on the Vancouver team of the Tri-City league again yesterday. Vancouver won the game from Albina 5 to 0. Hereafter Smith and King will play regularly on the team, as will Chaslin, Hill and Pender, all former Eugene players.

A baseball game between the "Spud Killers" and the Jasper team was played on the "Spud Rollers" grounds above Springfield yesterday, resulting in a score of 11 to 12 in their favor. Two well-known Eugene players were in the game, one of them playing and the other umpiring.

J. I. Taylor, Frank Taylor and A. Soderstrom, appraisers of the estate of Herbert W. Lee, deceased, today filed their inventory with the probate court. They found property valued at $601. Wm. Preston, Darwin Bristow and S. B. Eakin, appraisers of the estate of Mrs. Margaret Odell found property belonging to her valued at $1993.

Love Affairs of Royalty.
King Mannel doesn't see why he should marry some girl that he doesn't love just because he is sitting on a tottering and wobbly legged throne. One dark eyed little lady who has nothing to recommend her but her good looks and her winning ways strikes him as the proper material out of which to make a queen.

He considers the blood in her veins much superior to a good deal of the royal blood that has come under his notice.

He doesn't particularly hanker to tie up with some hatchet faced damsel old enough to be his aunt Susie just to keep tradition from throwing a fit.

However, the king is young, and youth always feels like telling experience to chase itself. In a few years he will probably be so subdued and chastened that he will marry any one they tell him to and pretend that he likes it.

Some Elevation.
"He has a great high jumping record."
"How high?"
"A seventy-three dollar board bill."

A Fierce Proposition.
Count Boni de Castellane, who divides his time between raising whiskies and trouble and not very much of either in comparison to the blowing he does, is going to challenge the future husband of his past wife to a fierce and bloody duel, weapons not stated, presumably toothpicks.

Every time Boni walks past a restaurant because he cannot afford to go in he feels like being real saucy to some one, presumably the author of his woes.

It never occurs to the funny little Frenchman that he was the architect of his own misfortunes and that he did a job of it of which from an artistic standpoint he has reason to be proud.

The only thing he can see is the meal ticket before his eyes that isn't there, and he gets so furious that he almost feels like hiring some one to take a licking from him.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.
The man who comes a self confessed bearer of good news gets mad if you presume to use your own judgment as to whether his news is good.

Industry is the vice of energetic people.

Women try to conceal their ages, but men don't. They know it is hopeless.

When a man forgets his own name sometimes he isn't as absentminded as he would appear.

If self conscious, bashful or conceited people know how little people really trouble about them it would probably make them so mad that they would be eternally cured.

CRAZY JAPANESE AT LARGE WITH AN AXE

MEMBER OF RAILROAD CONSTRUCTION CREW ATTEMPTS TO KILL FELLOW LABORERS

One of the Japanese laborers at work on the Southern Pacific depot yard improvements became violently insane this forenoon about 11:30 o'clock, and picking up an axe on the ground made for several of his fellow workmen, and would have perhaps killed one or two of them had not the others disarmed him before he could reach those he started at. After being disarmed the fellow ran down the track and out through the southwestern part of town. When last heard of he was out beyond College Hill, and it is said he stopped at the residence of A. E. Wood on West Eighth street and secured another axe. Several of his fellow-workmen are after him and may catch him before he injures any one or himself.

This Jap has been in a bad condition mentally for some time past, and several times his companions have had to take pistols and knives away from him. Dr. W. Kuykendall examined him not long ago and pronounced him insane but no action was taken in the case.
