set forth the principles of the party and declare the policies upon which we shall ask for the support of the people of the United States. With fullness and with eloquence, your temporary chairman has already reviewed the history of the party and has given you an account of what has been done, and has set forth what we have and mean to do. My duty is merely to aid you, so far as I can, in the orderly and prompt transaction of the business which has brought us together.

"On the Republican side: free soil; free men; the Union; the payment of the debt; honest money; protection to American industry; the gold industry; the maintenance of law, of order and of the courts and the government regulation of great corporations.' The old shiboleths of the Democrats are today the epitaphs of policies which are dead and damned. They serve only to remind us of dangers escaped or to warn us of perils to be shunned. The battle cries of the Republicans have been the watchwords of great causes. They tell of victories won and triumphs tasted—they are embodied in the laws and mark the stepping stones by which the Republic has risen to ever greater heights of power and prosperity.

"As we thus call up the past and the echoes of these old conflicts again sound in our ears and touch the chords of memory, one great fact stands forth clear and shining. The Republican party has never failed except when it has faltered. Our long career of victory, so rarely broken, has been due to our meeting each question boldly as it arose, to our facing every danger, as it crossed our path, with entire courage, fearless of consequences and determined only to be true to the principles which brought the party into existence and to the spirit which inspired it from its birth.

"We faced secession rather than assent to the extension of slavery. Rather than submit to secession we took up the dread burden of civil war. But a few years ago we permitted thousands of Republicans to leave us, thereby imperiling our political power rather than abandon the gold standard and plunge the country into disaster and dishonor.

"In these latest years, as in the most remote, we have been true to our traditions. In the process of development a point was reached where the country was confronted by a situation more perilous than any it has ever faced except in the Civil War and we Republicans were, therefore, obliged to deal with problems of the most complex and difficult character.

"To our honor, be it said, we have not shrunk from the task. Much has been done,— much no doubt, still remains to do— but the great underlying principles have been established and upon them we can build, as necessity arises, carefully and deliberately.

"The policy of the Republican Party, in dealing with these new and formidable questions which have taken concrete form in enormous combinations of capital and in great public service corporations, has been formulated and determined. The policy is to use government regulation and supervision for the control of corporations and combinations so that these great and necessary instruments of commerce and business may be preserved as useful servants and not destroyed because they have threatened to become dangerous masters.

This policy is the absolute opposite of government ownership and all like measures, advocated by our opponents, which tend directly to Socialism and to all its attendant miseries and evils.

"It is in pursurance of this policy, shaped and settled, during the past few years, that old laws have been enforced and new ones enacted.

Nothing is more destructive to the respect for law—the chief bulwark of civilized society—than to place laws upon the statute book in order merely to still public clamor and satisfy the people but which it is never intended to enforce. The worst laws imaginable are those which are allowed to rust, unused, because, if enforced, they might interfere with vested abuses or curb the rich and powerful.

"The President has enforced the laws as he has found them on the statute book. For this performance of his sworn duty, he has been bitterly attacked. It was to be expected. Vested abuses and profitable wrongs cry out loudly when their entrenchments are carried, and some one is sure to be hurt when the bayonets of the law are pushed home. In the great American Electorate, money has few votes but it can command many voices and cause many voices to sing. The result is that the President is the best abused and the most popular man in the United States today. He has been more abused than any president except Washington, Lincoln and Grant. He possesses the love and confidence of the American people to a degree never equaled except by Lincoln and Washington. May it not be said, in sober truth, that the fearless performances of a sworn duty is not without its exceeding great reward.

The President, who has led his party and the people in this great work, retires, by his on determination, from his high office on the Fourth of March next. His refusal of a renomination, dictated by the loftiest motives and by a noble loyalty to American traditions, is final and irrevocable. Any one, who attempts to use his name as a candidate for the presidency, impugns both his sincerity and his good faith, two of the President's greatest and most conspicuous qualities, upon which no shadow has ever been cast. That man is no friend to Theodore Roosevelt, and does not cherish his name and fame, who now, from any motive seeks to urge him as a candidate for the great office which he has finally declined. The President has refused what his countrymen would gladly have given him; he says what he means and means what he says, and his party and his country will respect his wishes as they honor his high character and great public service.

But although the President retires he leaves his policies behind him. To those policies the Republican party stands pledged. We must carry out as we have begun, regardless alike of the radicals or revolution. We must hold fast to that which is good while we make the advances which the times demand.

"We believe in the maintenance of law and order and in the support of the courts in all their rights and dignity. We believe in equal rights for all men and are opposed to special privileges for any man, or any class of men, high or low, rich or poor. We, who established the gold standard, are pledged to the cause of sound finance. We stand for protection to American industry and American labor, and we will resist all the assaults of free trade under whatever name it comes disguised. We will see to the defence of the country. We mean to have a navy worthy of the American name. We seek peace and friendship with all the nations but alliances with none. Yet, we have no intention of being a "Hermit Nation". The great services of the President to the World's peace will be continued by the party which he has led. We are a party fit to rule and govern, to legislate and to administer, and not a tortuitous collection of atoms whose only form of thought or motion is to oppose. Above all, we are true to our traditions and to our past: True, now, as we were in the days of Lincoln.

"In this spirit we must prevail—by this sign we must conquer."
