CASE AGAINST BOOTH WEAKER THAN EXPECTED.

Portland, Or., June 24.—Francis J. Heney and W. J. Burns, formerly of the Secret Service have been asked to come to Portland to testify in the case of James Henry Booth, now being tried on a charge of accepting a bribe while receiver of the Roseburg Land office for giving Frederick Kribs advance information. Without Heney and Burns, Tracy C. Becker, special assistant to the attorney general, feels that his case is not so strong as he would like, and in order to convict Booth, Becker has telegraphed Heney repeatedly urging his attendance. Burns and Heney are still in San Francisco connected with the graft cases. Burns should be now on his way to Portland but is not, and Heney is expected to arrive and give his testimony Saturday.

As soon as Booth has given his testimony, Heney will be wired to come for rebuttal. The Booth indictment was the last one brought by Heney and it is based on information given by Frederick Kribs. The indictment was brought in April, 1905, and not until Monday, more than three years after indictment was secured by Heney, was Booth brought to trial.

Only one juror, Clarence C. Tripp of Portland, was selected this morning, and there is still one vacancy in the box, two having been premptorily challenged by the defense. At noon one prospective juror had been examined and accepted by the defense, but was held in abeyance by the prosecution. Judge C. E. Wolverton, after two days and a half, became anxious at noon, and inquired when the case would begin, as the selecting of the jury had consumed a great deal of time.

Becker had no information for the court, but said he would confer with L. R. Webster, one of the attorneys for the defense. The supposition is that the twelfth juror will be picked up this afternoon and the opening statements can be made before adjournment at 5 o'clock.

The witness will be placed on the stand tomorrow. The government will use Kribs and Mr. Allen of Roseburg. Booth will go on his own defense and may bring many character witnesses, unless there is a small army of character witnesses for Booth, all the testimony is expected to be in by Saturday night, which will give the counsel Sunday in which to prepare the closing arguments to the jury.

Owing to the absence of Chairman S. S. Bean, of the University Board of Regents, the meeting which comes regularly on the 23rd of June has been postponed until the first of July.
