RED LETTER DAY IN EUGENE'S HISTORY.

Yesterday was in all respects a red letter day for Eugene, when the highest railroad officials in the country took notice of the occasion. General Manager Kruschnitt, of the Harriman lines wired from the East his congratulations and well-wishes, and General Manager O'Brien of the Northwest, was one of the most pleased and enthusiastic of the Portland excursionists. Portland speakers at the dinner predicted that many of those present would live to see Eugene a city of 50,000 people and the spirit of our citizens was commented upon by every visitor in the most favorable terms.

The interest and friendship of the railroad people means a great deal for the future of Eugene, when it is admitted that one of the first of the proposed new Harriman lines to be constructed in the west, will be the Oregon Eastern, extending down into California, via Klamath Falls, as well as eastward to connect with the Oregon Short line at Ontario. With the terminus of this great system in Eugene or Springfield, or perhaps between the two towns, soon to be connected by a street railway, this city must become the most important interior jobbing point in the west, as well as a great milling and manufacturing center. Therefore, the friendship of the railroad magnates will be an essential factor in our future growth, their interest and assistance being all that is needed to make a great city here within the next ten years.

A man living in the vicinity of San Jose, (Calif.) has discovered that the bite of a rattlesnake is a sure antidote for insanity. He has tried it and knows what he is talking about. It is related that this man, James Gillman, by name, became mentally unbalanced a number of years ago because of the death of his wife and certain financial troubles, and, although not at all violent, he has been considered "off" since the incidents alluded to. Not long ago he was out working on his farm in the mountains and came across a rattler, which bit him on the hand. The man rushed to the house, which was presided over by his daughter, and the young lady bled the wound which was rapidly showing all the symptoms of poisoning. When the effects of the snakebite passed off it was found that the hithertoo insane man was perfectly sane and he has since that time been enjoying all his mental faculties. Here is something the medical world can digest at its leisure. But is not the remedy worse than the disease?

Portland, too, is going after those residents who neglect to cut the grass and weeds about their premises. The Oregonian says: "A drastic ordinance, the terms of which compel property-owners to clear their premises of thistles and weeds to the curb-line, was passed by the city council yesterday afternoon, and unless it is vetoed by Mayor Lane, will become a law in due time."

Thomas F. Ryan, the New York millionaire, is an anti-Bryan delegate to the Denver convention from a Virginia county in which he maintains a legal residence for political purposes. Tommy was one of the bunch that nominated and [illegible] Parker four years ago, but [illegible] he nor they have much chance to win out now.

Rumor says Taft is willing to entertain any suggestion as to getting into better sprinting trim, [illegible] that he reduce his weight by [illegible] his mustache. "Teddy" [illegible] a mustache, you know, though it isn't in the trained and curled Taft class—it's more of a [illegible].

"Lend A Hand," the paper [illegible]

in the Oregon State penitentiary to the convicts is very [illegible] reflect great credit upon [illegible] [illegible] is made [illegible]

[illegible] comes to a [illegible] in [illegible] Rev. Henry [illegible] who has announced his [illegible] to devote his life to the suppression of the [illegible] not be overworked, else it [illegible] to make one.

That old serpent, seen off Newport, was probably only trying to get into communication with the society leaders who gave those monkey dinners, with a view to having something pulled off in his honor.

Should the [illegible] thing fad [illegible] continue to increase at the present rate it's only a question of time when they'll reach the things most in need of [illegible] themselves.

Every visitor to Eugene yesterday carried away a copy of the Guard as a souvenir. The report of the banquet, and pictures of the University building and local scenes [illegible] them.

Inasmuch as Judge Gray says, "I am out of national politics," those men who have opened "Gray headquarters" in Denver are liable to be charged with sailing under false colors.

We presume the Austrian princess has stirred up Europe by eloping with an automobile agent, was actuated by a desire to avoid future trouble with her machine.

The factories of the glove trust can now work overtime all the time. The authorities of Pittsburg have ordered the smuttown police to wear white gloves when on duty.

If the average female devotee of fashion had the epigram habit, she would probably say: "I care not who ridicules the newest fads in clothes, as long as I can wear 'em."

Bryan has only to say the right word—a promise of course,—and the Tammany braves will be the loudest Bryan shouters at the Denver convention.

And now a good many are wondering if the Denver convention will have a democratic Frank Hitchcock and a steam roller.

The United States has no living ex-presidents.

Heart to Heart Talks.

HE WAS COLOR BLIND.

A New York man named Black committed suicide the other day and took the trouble to tell the world his reasons.

Somehow the average suicide seems to feel in an indistinct kind of way that his rash action requires some sort of justification.

Black left a note in which he says he found no beauty in life, nothing but "hypocrisy, deceit and selfishness."

An honest wail, doubtless, but—

A little introspection might have taught him that the lack was not in the world, but in himself. There is plenty of truth and sincerity and self sacrifice in the world, but he could not see it.

Why?

Because he saw only what every man must see—a reflection of himself.

He who is drunken can see only a drunken world. He who is a pessimist sees gloom. He who is dishonest considers all men dishonest.

Every man is a microcosm—a miniature world.

If this man had looked into the world of himself he would have there discovered a share of the "hypocrisy, deceit and selfishness" he complained of in others.

If he found no beauty in the world it was because there was no beauty in his life, else the beauty in his life would have found a fit companionship with the beauty that is everywhere.

And contrariwise—

One is assimilated into the likeness of those things that he loves and admires. If this man had really loved and admired beauty and truth and goodness he would have been changed into the likeness of beauty and truth and goodness. That is the inevitable law of assimilation.

That is the trouble with the average critic and reformer. He fails to criticise himself. He neglects to reform himself.

If Diogenes, instead of going about the streets of Athens with a lighted lantern looking in vain for an honest man, had held the lantern to the recesses of his own heart he might have discovered a lack as great.

Poor suicide! He was color blind and could not see the beauty that was all about him.
