NECESSITY OF PERSERVING EFFORT AT PRESENT TIME.

The property owners and business men of Eugene should bear in mind that this, of all times is the time to boost and work to shove the town ahead. Since the financial flurry of last year, general conditions throughout the country have not been good, the business outlook has been uncertain and many industries have been crippled or closed. It is in times like this that the metal of a community is tried. A naturally good town is sure to go ahead in prosperous times, but it requires work and all-round hustling to advance in the face of the adverse conditions that have prevailed throughout the country of late.

Eugene is growing and building up simply because the people are alive to the necessity of bestirring themselves. It is costing them some money to improve and advertise, and naturally there those who think the load is heavy to carry. The fact remains, however, that property values are advancing, and that there is less talk of "hard times" than in a majority of communities. With a steady but slow improvement all over the country we are in splendid shape to enjoy a wonderful improvement, when times again reach a normal state. This will be the reward of our enterprise and perseverance, and it will place us far in advance of most of the other towns of Oregon, if we persist in the work, and do not get discouraged because immediate results are not what they would be if a condition of prosperity existed throughout the country.

VANISHING TIMBER RESOURCES OF COUNTRY.

Statistics concerning the annual output of forest products, collected by the bureau of the census in cooperation with the United States forest service, from more than 2,100 saw mill operators in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, have shown that the cut last year was 12 per cent less than the cut of the preceding year.

The cut of white pine in Michigan last year was only a fourth of what it was in 1899, only eight years before.

Now, 6,000,000 acres, or nearly a sixth of the state of Michigan, known as the "pine barrens," have been thrown on the delinquent tax list and are a burden to the people.

Between 1899 and last year the white pine production fell off nearly as much in Wisconsin as in Michigan. In Minnesota the decrease in the same period was nearly a third.

Along this great decrease in pine relatively as heavy decreases [illegible] in the most valuable of the hard woods.

CASE AGAINST BOOTH SHOWS UP WEAK.

The trial of J. Henry Booth in the federal court, is developing a weaker case than the advance promises of Mr. Heney and his associates led the public to believe. Mr. Booth, defendant in the present case, and his brother, Senator Booth, are [illegible] accused, having been indicted at the time when the Heney dragnet was gathering its harvest in this [illegible] the disclosures in some of the [illegible] that aroused public indignation [illegible] has voiced the popular clamor for conviction and punishment and [illegible] the panic and terror among those who had in any way been connected with public land irregularities [illegible] made confessions under stress, [illegible] implicating former associates and friends, it being well known that Heney's efforts were directed against prominent politicians and that [illegible] leniency was held out as a [illegible] premium to all who would [illegible] testimony against those marked for special prosecution. The result has been that the greatest land grabbers of all, like Frederick Krebs and the [illegible] he represented, escaped, while many of those who refused to confess that they were guilty of crime were indicted and until now [illegible] their cases [illegible]. [illegible] refused to admit [illegible] guilt [illegible] indicted [illegible] of the others [illegible] [illegible] officers. That they will pass [illegible] trials without [illegible] present to [illegible], it is all that their friends [illegible], they ask no favors at the [illegible] and it is to their credit that they never have done so.

That Senator Booth and his brother have many personal friends in Southern and Western Oregon, who hope for their vindication, goes without saying. They have been progressive, enterprising business men, bearing the best of personal reputations and a live in educational and church work. That they have also made some enemies [illegible] the personal sequence of strenuous political and business careers in this age of [illegible] competition, rivalry and conflicting ambitions. The corporation which they helped to form pioneered the way for lumbering on a large scale in Lane county, and all know what that has done for the business life and growth of this city and territory tributary to it. No other interior section of the Northwest has the industry so well developed. All have now an object lesson in its partial shutting down and are hoping for its early resumption. Where would Eugene and Lane county have been now, in respect to prosperity and development, had not enterprising men staked their all on the future of the industry at a time when the outlook was precarious and uncertain and timber land was so valueless that a majority of the people considered it not worth the government price?

Those who are so prone to adjudge accused persons guilty in advance of a trial even, should consider these things in the pending cases before the federal court at Portland.

That is a most astounding headline of the account of the Rhinehart family reunion in this morning's paper, "Whole d—d Family in Annual Reunion." The "d—d", if there is anyone ignorant of its meaning, being the contraction for "damned." "Whole damned Family in Annual Reunion!" Doesn't it sound nice in the town of churches and educational institutions? The quotation of the slang does not lessen the offense against decency, as well as a reflection upon one of the most respected pioneer families of the West.

The people of Kansas are still living up to their reputation gained by their woeful experiences more than half a century ago. One year it is drouth, grasshoppers and famine, and the next floods and tornadoes. This is flood year and a great amount of damage has been done by high waters. In the entire state it is estimated that fully three-quarters of a million of acres of wheat has been ruined by the floods. Poor Kansas! Surely the state is struggling under a curse.

It is said that the Pullman Company is figuring on charging on a mileage basis in the future, just the same as an ordinary transportation company. The public has but little interest in what may be determined in the matter, for it is assured that the Pullman Company will charge all the traffic will bear just as it is doing now.

By the means of a simple electrical device, it is related that President Roosevelt actually heard the Chicago convention. Well, the noises [illegible] about even after all. The [illegible] convention heard the President [illegible] [illegible] and heeded it [illegible]

THOMAS L. LEWIS.

John Mitchell's successor as president of the United Mine Workers of America, Thomas L. Lewis, already has had large experience in labor executive work. He held the position of treasurer of the United Mine Workers for two years and then was chosen vice president. Earlier in life Mr. Lewis was prominent in the Knights of Labor organization. He was born forty-two years ago at Midway, Pa., and worked in the anthracite mines many years, beginning at the tender age of seven. His father was a coal miner, a native of Wales. The family removed to Martins Ferry, O., when Tom Lewis was a youth.

the yellow men of India in practical slavery, thus demonstrating that consistency is as rare among nations as among men.

Evidently the esteemed lady writer who declared the Chicago convention "a good deal of a joke" had no men folk among the "allies," or she would have known that it was anything else but a joke.

Recent prices have aroused the suspicion that John D. Rockefeller has acquired a controlling interest in the beef trust and is introducing Standard Oil methods in its selling department.

With the army of wide-awake newspaper men that attended the Chicago National convention, we cannot understand the failure to round up a single Japanese spy during the proceedings.

A Milwaukee editor has discovered that we shall be using nine kinds of money before long. Still, it is the one best bet that the "easy" brand will continue to be a hot favorite.

WOMEN CIGARETTE SMOKERS.

Why shouldn't women smoke cigarettes if they choose? Cigarettes are not particularly harmful except to young persons. After one has arrived at the age of twenty-five years there is no reason why one should be denied the comfort of tobacco."

Thus declares a society woman of New York who is starting a crusade in favor of women cigarette smokers.

Well—

"It is all a matter of taste," as the old woman said when she kissed her cow.

It depends on the point of view.

Smoking is regarded by most persons as [illegible] habit, but the habit [illegible] everywhere regarded as ungentlemanly [illegible], so that custom has much [illegible] opinion in the matter.

[illegible]

The [illegible] American does not like to see a woman smoke. So that she who [illegible] for the good opinion of the average man will not indulge in [illegible]. As for the woman's right [illegible] who will contest it?

[illegible]

In the days of our grandmothers it was customary for women, especially [illegible] to use tobacco freely [illegible] [illegible] "granny's pipe" from the [illegible] of the ancient fireplace. And [illegible] first learned to smoke in [illegible]. Earlier in the history of [illegible] the grande dames of the [illegible] were famous [illegible]

[illegible] smoking habit appears to be [illegible] If you will go into [illegible] [illegible] you will see [illegible] cigarettes at table [illegible] is becoming [illegible] among society people [illegible]

The sensibilities of the old fashioned person are greatly shocked when he first observes women smoking in public. And he shrinks from the thought of his wife or daughter doing such a thing.

Indeed, one feels as if he could almost denounce these people because of what he feels to be a useless, filthy innovation.

But—

If men expect women to give up the smoking custom they must themselves set the example. The man who smokes cannot logically deny the right to a woman. Every reason alleged against the feminine use of tobacco holds against the masculine use.

Is it not so?
