ELECTRIC RAILROAD MAGNATES IN EUGENE

J. W. Anderson, of Spokane, a prominent shareholder in the Willamette Valley Company and other concerns of like nature in the Pacific Northwest, and A. Welch, general manager of the company and of the Eugene & Eastern Railway Company, arrived in Eugene late this afternoon in an automobile. They are here for the purpose of looking after the construction work on the Eugene-Springfield trolley line and of other proposed extensions of the local street railway system.

HOGS DYING FROM EFFECTS OF HEAT

Nels Raunn, a farmer residing near Eugene, brought to town today a drove of hogs for shipment to Portland. The long drive in the hot sun told on them, and when they reached the stock yards at the depot grounds they were in a bad condition as a result of the heat. Several of them died during the afternoon before they were loaded on the car, and a number of others were expected to die.

OREGON ELECTRIC BUILDS BY NIGHT

Portland, July 6.—Attempting to resist a construction gang of the Oregon Electric Railway Company in laying tracks through her onion garden near Beaverton yesterday, Mrs. Rosie Rehgito placed herself against a fence and declares she suffered a broken arm when the crew began to demolish the fence. Mrs. Rehgito clung to the fence, and when the foreman of the construction crew knocked off a plank with a sledgehammer her arm was broken, she says. With her time a serious conflict was threatened. However, peace was restored, and the workmen proceeded to push the work on the grade and lay ties and iron.

Sheriff Goes to Scene

Sheriff Connell and Deputy Cain, of Washington county, were summoned and urged to arrest the alleged trespassers. But a few minutes before the officers arrived the construction gangs were called off the disputed territory and the officers were powerless. The men remained idle near the grounds throughout the afternoon, until the departure of the officers, and then renewed their work with doubled energy. Last night the men worked with the aid of kerosene lamps. The big onion patch was illuminated brilliantly and early this morning the roadway through the disputed territory had been completed, the ties laid and the rails secured in place. This morning the courts will be prayed for an injunction by the irate owners and lessees of the property, but the tracks are down.

YOUNG LADY CLEVER NEWSPAPER WRITER

Miss Miriam Van Waters, of Portland, who is a guest of Miss Alice McCormack, is a member of the Sunday staff of the Portland Oregonian and one of the promising young writers of Oregon. She recently completed a post-graduate course in the Oregon University at Eugene, and during her school work found time for many clever magazine articles in addition to her routine work as staff correspondent of the Oregonian. Coos Bay readers are familiar with some of Miss Van Waters' work, her description of the manner in which Eugene received the news that the University appropriation carried was given on half a page with special illustrations. Miss Van Waters returns to Portland Tuesday. — Marshfield Times.

OFFICER TURNER MAKES STATEMENT

Eugene, July 7, 1908. To the Editor:—I beg leave to make a statement in reply to the item that came out in The Guard last evening regarding the Smith and Berger affair on the evening of July 4. I will say that I did not arrest Jake Berger. I was asked by Officer Keop to assist in getting Berger to the city jail, which I was doing, and in so doing George Smith ran in front of us and took hold of Berger, and said: "What is the matter with you, Jim? He hasn't done anything. You can't take him." I asked Smith to get out of the way and not to interfere. He refused to get on. I tried to pull him loose, but he wanted to argue the case there. I did not propose to be interfered with in the discharge of my duty as an officer. J. P. TURNER.
