represents the classes and has eliminated from the catalogue of progressive the "square deal." One who stands for might as against equally and promotes the creature at the expense of the creator; who is the representative of organized wealth to the detriment of national welfare; who stands for a centralized government as against the rights of the state; who struck at labor to destroy, not to protect. Against such a commander as this, the Democratic party offers as its candidate, a man.

"A man of Christian devotion, whose banner is equal rights, and whose motto is love of country."
"A man of unbounded wealth of love, and with a moral courage that is the admiration and pride of his countrymen."
"A man who stands for a single standard of morality, in public and private life."

"A man who when the hour was darkest, when Democracy was trailing in the dust, caught her up with loving embrace of a father until today throughout the world his name and Democracy are synonymous."

"Iowa, the imperial state of the middle west, whose electoral vote today hangs in the balance, unites with her sister state of Nebraska in presenting for your consideration as one fit to hold the highest office within the gift of the American people, that peerless leader of Democracy, William J. Bryan."

"Name him as your standard bearer and from early morn until late at night, every breeze will wait the song of his success."

"Name him, and the Mississippi Valley from the great copper mines of Montana to the cotton fields of Louisiana will rejoice in his election."

"Name him and the laborer at the forge in Pennsylvania will unite with the orange picker of California in proclaiming his virtue and loving the principles he advocates."

"Name him and the manufacturer of the east and the farmer of the west will stand shoulder to shoulder for the enlarging of the commerce and trade of our country."

"Name him, and from every church will ascend the prayers, from every home the hopes and aspirations of a loving people, that he may be their Chief Executive."

"Name him, and there will pass, as with the rapidity of the lightning's flash throughout the length and breadth of this nation, a current of reanimated and rejuvenated patriotism."

"Name him, and labor will hold high its head with courage and with hope. Capital will be inspired with faith and with confidence and the people will rejoice that Democratic rights are to be restored."

"Name the man amid the thundering of opposition, and the clouds of prejudice, stood as an adamant rock for the integrity of this nation and hurried into the face of the detractors of his country the right of the people to rule."

"Name him that the world may know a republican form of government still lives."

Florida Second Bryan

Frank L. Hayes, editor of the Pensacola, (Fla.) Journal said:
"We are for Mr. Bryan also because, single-handed and alone, without office, without patronage, with no official power to punish or reward, with no money influence back of him, he has won the confidence and respect of the American people, and his name is presented to this convention by direct wish and command of the people themselves. We are for him, because, in marked contrast to the distinguished nominee of the republican party, he is his own man—he has won his spurs on his own merits—and in his nomination is not forced at the heavy end of a big stick."

"Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the democrats of Florida, a state that has always gone democratic—except when the republicans appoint a commission to steal its electoral vote—I ask this convention to ratify the nomination of Wm. J. Bryan, the greatest and ablest democrat whom the American republic has produced since the days of Jefferson."

O'Boyle Second Gray

In responding to the nomination of Judge Gray, P. A. O'Boyle, of Pittston, Penn., said:
"No power was great enough to sweep him from his line of duty, and no condition of poverty too low to be, by him neglected. In the final judgment which was rendered by him, and which has become history, he has elevated labor to a higher plane than it has ever occupied; and a grateful people in ages yet to come, will bless that great statesman and pacifier, George Gray of Delaware. By his wisdom and integrity, he has placed in the hands of labor the magic rod of Aaron, and by the spirit of justice which he has everywhere diffused, he has expanded the power of the justice of the law. Give us this great champion of the cause of humanity who knows no race nor creed distinction, no North, no South, no East, no West, but one, who as President, would be the chief value of all recognizing only the great brotherhood of man."

"Well may we apply to him the language of that great Roman—
"If it be aught toward the general good
Set honor in one eye, and death in the other,
And I will look as both indifferent."
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of him more than I that doth deceit."

"Let us have a man on this occasion who will sustain with honor the great traditions of his party; one who is the legitimate successor of that great galaxy of democrats, composed of such men as Jefferson, Jackson, the Clintons, Tilden, the Bayards and that great heart just stilled in death, Grover Cleveland. Let us have one who could with propriety employ the language of the ancient warrior Mathathias, who, when he found his people had begun the profanation of their worship of other gods, exclaimed: "Every one that hath zeal for the law and maintaineth the testament, let him follow me."

"With slight alteration may we not now exclaim: All those who love the majesty of the law and adhere to the Constitution, let them bid in placing in the hands of this warrior the standard of Democracy, and as who is wafted by the winds from every fold will come forth the inspiring words, Gray—the champion of a rejuvenated and successful Democracy."

"Gentlemen, it affords me the greatest pleasure to second the nomination of that tried statesman and matchless jurist, who, in my judgment, will be the next President of the United States, if you have the wisdom and patriotism to name him."
—Judge George Gray of Delaware.

Judge Powers for Bryan

Judge O. W. Powers, of Salt Lake City, spoke for Bryan. He said:

"By reason of our Constitution, our chief magistrate wields a power but few comprehend. He moulds our laws and controls our policy. His office is one requiring the loftiest statesmanship, the severest self-abnegation. The office should be filled by a man so close to the people that he can hear their heart-beats and understand the longings that throbbeth with the pulsations of their earnest life."

"Such a president must come from the ranks of the people. He should come from the great West, where the voice of God borne upon the breezes of the prairie bears a message of more import than arises from the tongue of a stock tucker in Wall Street. Such a president of necessity must come from the Democratic party whose principles were crystallized from innate longings in the human heart for liberty. Such a president was nominated at Chicago in 1896, when the Democracy of Jefferson was reincarnated and the roar of human acclimation that greeted his name swept out of the convention hall like a tidal wave of hope and love upon its great suffrage of 6,000,000 of untought voters who named him as their choice."

"He called a well-to-do hopeless party and so well did he endow it with his lofty courage that it met defeat without faltering and again bravely holds his name aloft as a beacon of promise. He is today once more the choice of the Democratic party for president. He is today the choice of the common people for the president and in their name and in the name of the state of Utah, I second the nomination of William J. Bryan."

Other Speeches

In responding Bryan, John R. Atwood of Kansas, said:

"Great as is our incomparable leader, great as the adoption of his doctrine by his enemies claim him to be, the foundation of the party's faith in him is shown from their faith in his integrity. Many a great man has the world produced and men differ as to the place which they are entitled in the pantheon of fame, but it is not true today, as it was in the elder time, that the primal place in the book of gold is reserved for him who is great because he loves his fellow men? Such is our leader, the man of the people, the statesman whose wisdom has been proved in the crucible of the years, whom most men love; whom no man hates; whose enemies respect while they revile him; the democratic ideal, the ideally honest man, William Jennings Bryan."

James T. Heflin of Denver, spoke for Colorado in behalf of Bryan's candidacy, saying in part:

"Mr. Chairman, we are told in Holy Writ that King Darius sought to make Daniel Chief of the Presidents in his kingdom because 'an excellent spirit was in him.' Democracy's able and fearless leader in whose many breast dwells and excellent spirit will in my judgment, be elected President of the United States. Pampered by no power and pensioned by no class he will break down the trust idols in the Temple of Liberty just as Daniel of old broke the gilded images of Babylonish idolatry. And above the panic stricken genius of business will be heard the hum of wheels and the voice of a healthy industry. Today when the whole country is looking for a man to stretch forth the healing rod as did Aaron of old to give the land deliverance, William Jennings Bryan surrounded by the hosts of democracy, resembles a mighty cliff emerging from the sea. The waves of reform have beat against it, the winds of hate have howled around its massive form—the lightning bolts of sarcasm have descended upon its brow and the clouds of misund understanding have hung round its colossal head, but look! The waves are calm, the winds are hushed, the sky is clear—the clouds have gone, and lo! the rock is there supreme and indestructible. Elect Bryan president, and he will be just to all, partial to none, but unworriedly for the right as God gives him the power to discern it."
