soon engaged in a political conference. At Newton, Iowa, a large crowd gathered about the car and called for Bryan. He was only partially dressed, but putting his head out of the window said: "Good morning, gentlemen." He expressed regret that he did not know that a speech had been expected, or he would have been up to say a few words. Bryan greeted a Des Moines crowd of a thousand at an early hour. He was literally carried from the train to an express truck, where he made a five-minute talk amid great cheering. Bryan promised to return to Iowa to speak during the campaign.

The three names mentioned are L. R. Traver, a professor at Monmouth Normal; Professor Marlette, principal of the Salem high school, and A. L. Briggs, president of the Drain Normal. Traver has had great experience at the head of city schools and always held a high place among superintendents. He has served in Roseburg, Salem and Pendleton, besides smaller places.
