JUDGE TAFT SAYS HE WILL TAKE NOMINATION

with joy to the rally managers as proof of the falsity of the statements that the negro race was dissatisfied with the republican ticket.

The event of the morning was the flag-raising on the lawn of the residence of Charles P. Taft on Pike street, which was accompanied by appropriate ceremonies. The crowds that surged about the Taft home and overran the lawn and steps threatened almost to wreck the house itself in the general eagerness to hear the speeches and see what was going on. The day was clear and warm, but the crowds seemed not to mind the heat.

Half-past eleven found the members of the notification committee at the Taft residence in readiness for the real event of the day. It was after 12, however, before the ceremonies began. The speech-making was conducted from a flag-draped platform erected on the lawn. Surrounding it were the members of the notification committee, the local reception committee and a host of eminent party leaders gathered from every section of the country. There were but two addresses, that of Senator Warner, as chairman of the committee, and Judge Taft's speech of acceptance.

Senator Warner's Speech

The chairman of the notification committee spoke as follows:

"You are of course, not unaware that Mr. Roosevelt's term as President of the United States will expire on March fourth, nineteen hundred and nine; that the political parties of our country are perfecting their organizations preparatory to presenting to the people, at the general election to be held in November, next, their respective candidates for that high office; that the Republican Party in national convention, composed of delegates representing every state and territory and the outlying possessions of the United States, assembled at Chicago on June 16th to 19th, inclusive, has completed its deliberations, that it has outlined and submitted to the citizenship of the Republic, for consideration and adoption, governmental policies, which it confidently believes will be of the highest service to the nation in her every part; that it has from among its strong and experienced statesmen,—men who serve the public has demonstrated their worthiness in clearness of character, devotion to the country and the welfare of the individual citizen, and with full understanding of the Nation's needs in her highest and best aspirations, selected you as its candidate for President,—the highest honor that can be conferred by this Constitutional Republic, and I would, therefore add, the most exalted political office on this earth, and the committee which you see before you, whose chairmanship I have the honor to hold in the temporary absence from the United States of the Honorable Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, Permanent Chairman of the Republican National Convention, now tenders to you, at the direction of that Convention, the formal nomination of the Republican Party for the Presidency of the United States, and I hand you an engrossed copy of the platform of policies adopted by that Convention.

I cannot, sir, complete the discharge of this most agreeable duty without assuring you of the high respect in which you are held not only by those of your own political faith, but by your fellow citizens without regard to the party,—of their admiration of your ability, manifested throughout your public service; of their knowledge of the preparation which you will bring to the discharge of the high and difficult duties of President; of their belief, in your deep conviction of the equality of all men before the law, and in the practical application of that principle by any administration of which you may be the head, that Mr. Roosevelt, as President, has been squared, which has won for him the confidence and respect of his countrymen throughout the land, and which has brought to him at all times their unquestioned and earnest support. It was his universal application of this rule which caused his party, in National Convention, to pay him the following just and splendid tribute of approval:

"His administration is an epoch in American history. In no other period since the national sovereignty was under Washington or preserved under Lincoln has there been such mighty progress in those ideals of government which make for justice, equality and fair dealing among men. The highest aspirations of the American people have found voice. Their most exalted servant represents their best aims and worthiest purposes of all his countrymen. American manhood has been lifted up to a nobler sense of duty and obligation. Conscience and courage in public station and high standards of right and wrong in private life have been the cardinal principles of political life. Capital and labor have been brought into closer relations of confidence and interdependence, and the abuse of wealth and the tyranny of power, and all evils and privileged favoritism have been put to scorn by the simple and manly virtues of justice and fair play."

It is gratifying to your countrymen to reflect that of that administration you have been a conspicuous part, as you were of the administration of Mr. McKinley, whose accomplishments mark a national progress unsurpassed in all of our previous national life.

It therefore, gives me a genuine pleasure, Mr. Taft, to present to you this formal nomination from the Republican party, whose governmental policies have so long "kept in balance the mighty forces of the nation" and to whose continued guidance of the nation we have every reasonable right to believe that the people are now looking.

"The speech of the nominee was listened to with close attention by the great crowd that overflowed the porch, the yard, the sidewalks, and perched itself on the fence posts, telegraph poles and every other point of vantage. Several times Judge Taft was forced to stop by the vociferous cheering, and once of twice it was several minutes before he could continue his remarks.

"Safe government" as opposed to radicalism formed the keynote of the Taft speech. Assurances were given that the election of Mr. Taft would mean that the principles advocated by Theodore Roosevelt as president would continue to be urged until they became the law and settled policy of the United States. Reduction of the tariff was advocated, and attention directed to the plans of the Republican party for the revision of the schedules. The plan suggested by Mr. Bryan for controlling railroads and other large combinations of capital were attacked as futile and productive of no real benefit to the country at large. Other matters touched upon in the address included the injunction plank of the Republican platform and the revision of the currency laws.

The notification ceremonies were followed by a review of the marching clubs, which was the spectacular feature of the day's program. Several thousand marchers were in line and numerous bands. The procession was headed by the famous Blaine Club, the members of which, clad in white duck trousers and blue serge coats, presented a very naty appearance.

PROSECUTION HERDS WITNESSES IN BOOTH CASE

Portland, July 28.—There was a tilt between the attorneys for the prosecution and defense in the Booth-Singleton trial in the federal court this morning, which enlivened the proceedings. The tempest arose when one of the government's witnesses, Charles Barker, testified that he had made a statement as to what he knew about the case in the office of D. J. Malarkey, one of the lawyers for the defendants. T. C. Becker, assistant to the Attorney general, who is conducting the prosecution, began firing questions into Barker to learn how it came about that he had gone to the office of the opposition to give any information. The latter, though a government witness, made some capital for the defense by his replies. Barker said that a week ago, after supper, he and several other witnesses went to Malarkey's office at the request of the attorney, and there, with the doors wide open and without any attempt at secrecy, the various witnesses were asked to tell what they knew of Tom Agee's homestead claim on Cap's Illahee, the claim which was subsequently exchanged for timber land and sold to the Booth-Kelly Company, the basis for the indictment against the defendants. The statements of the witnesses who went to Malarkey's office were taken down by the stenographer who serves in the court.

After Becker had brought out the fact that the defense was obtaining information from the witnesses, Malarkey took a hand at Barker for further elucidation. Under the questioning of Malarkey Barker said that the lawyer informed him that the defense had as much right to learn what the witnesses would testify to as the prosecution. Barker said that the government had kept himself and the other witnesses herded upstairs in the federal building all day and that the only time they could see Malarkey was after supper. In making statements for the government Barker further admitted that the witnesses were examined separately by T. B. Neuhausen and apart from other witnesses, whereas when the defense asked for statements the witness told what he knew in the presence of a room filled with other witnesses, all more or less familiar with the same facts.

SAYS HUSBAND CURSED AND STROCK HER

MRS. MATHISEN, WIFE OF ONE OF GLASS FACTORY MEN, SEEKS TO BE FREE

Mrs. Alma Marie Mathisen has begun suit against Gustave Martinus Mathisen for divorce. Mathisen is one of the builders of the glass factory at Coburg, which promises to develop into an important industry there, but which has been closed down for some time past. Mrs. Mathisen, in her complaint filed last evening, says they were married in Christiania, Norway, on September 10, 1898. She alleges cruel and inhuman treatment as grounds for a legal separation, stating that her husband has at various times called her vile and indecent names, has heaped indignities upon her, and on one occasion after their marriage he struck her. She also says he is a habitual drunkard, and spends all his earnings for liquor. She alleges that in June, 1908, her husband left her without cause or provocation and has since continued to live separate from her. E. M. DeNette is attorney for the plaintiff.
