all west of the Cascade range. Another field lies in the basin of the John Day river, east of the Cascade range, but little is known concerning it. All the fields west of the range except the Coos bay are of rather small area, the largest being the Upper Nehalem, which is an area of less than 20 square miles. The coal of all these fields is lignitic. Its transportation is confined exclusively to Coos Bay and the Pacific ocean, and San Francisco is the principal market. The Coos Bay field is divided by its structure into six portions—four basins and two arches. The basins are known as the Newport, the Beaver Slough, the Coquille and the South Slough, and are separated by the Westport and Pulaski arches. As practically all of the product from Coos Bay has been shipped by water to San Francisco, the substitution of oil for coal in most of the manufacturing industries of that city has cut off a considerable portion of the market for this coal. The effect on Oregon's production is shown in a decrease from 109,641 tons in 1905 to 79,731 in 1906 and to 70,901 in 1907. The decrease in value of the 1907 product was even more pronounced, for while the production showed a decrease of 8750 tons, or 10.97 per cent, the value declined $16,034, or 21.68 per cent. The average price per ton declined from $2.50 in 1906 to $2.34 in 1907.

up a number of state tickets, but from excessive modesty of some other cause, they are not claiming that they will carry a single state which shows they are amateurs in the game of politics. Campaign papers galore have been run—usually at heavy expense—but the Commoner enjoys the distinction of being the only profitable paper that ever contributed its profits to a campaign. Incidentally, it is also enjoying the finest advertising a paper ever had. No law prescribes the social associates of a judge, but ordinary good taste ought to have been sufficient to have prevented Judge Grosseau's becoming the guest of a chum and business associate of John D. Rockefeller so soon after that Standard Oil decision. The deeper the legislative probe goes into the convict lease system of Georgia the more nauseous the mess gets to decent men. It's grat of the lowest order all-round—the sort that many convicts would be ashamed to profit by. New York City's big papers, with one or two exceptions, do not know just "where they are at" on the presidential question, if it be fair to judge them by the knocks they are handing the candidates indiscriminately. Since becoming chairman of the national committee of the Independence party William R. Hearst has made no promise about publicity of campaign contributions. However, that may be because he expects to make 'em himself. Speaking of talkfests, what's the matter with the drummers' congress that is to be pulled off during this week in New York city? The spell-binder never has had anything on the hypnotic drummer. Two years ago The Guard predicted that rapid and permanent growth would follow the paving of Eugene's business streets. Who will say now that the prediction made then has not been fulfilled? Lumber prices have been boosted in Portland because of increased demand. This is an excellent indication that the big mills of Lane county will soon be running again on full time. Prosperity talk is the order of the day from all classes of businessmen. Big cereal crops throughout the country and a strong market cannot fail to produce good times next fall. Yes, there are seven presidential tickets in the field, and it's the "one best bet" that you cannot name the men on them all off-hand. Eugene should now be a city of 25,000 people—and the fact that it is trying to make up for lost time largely accounts for the present building activity. We have never heard what is Mr. Bryan's favorite perfume, if he has one, but it is a good guess that it isn't Omaha Rosewater.

JIM. "Jim has a future front of him." That's what they used to say to Jim. For when young Jim was only ten, He mingled with the wisest men. With wisest men he used to mix. And talk of law and politics, And everybody said of Jim: "He has a future front of him." When Jim was twenty years of age, All costumed, ready for life's stage. He had a perfect man's physique, And knew philosophy and Greek; He'd delved in every misty tome Of old Arabia and Rome, And everybody said of Jim: "He has a future front of him." When Jim was thirty years of age He'd made a world-wide pilgrimage; He'd walked and studied 'near the fire Of German universities, And visited and pondered on The sites of Thebes and Babylon; And everybody said of Jim: "He has a future front of him." The heir to all earth's heritage Was Jim at forty years of age; The lure of all the years was shut And focussed in his occiput; And people thought, so much he knew: "What wondrous things our Jim will do." They more than ever said of Jim: "He has a future front of him." At fifty years, though Jim was changed, He had his knowledge well arranged, All tabulated, systematized, And adequately synthesized. His head was so well filled within, He thought: "I'm ready to begin." And everybody said of Jim: "He has a future front of him." At sixty—no more need be said— At sixty years poor Jim was dead. The preacher said that such as he Would shine to all eternity; In other words beyond the blue There was great work for him to do. And o'er his bier he said of Jim: "He has a future front of him." The great deeds we are going to do Shine against the vastness of the blue. Like sunset clouds of lurid light Against the background of the night; And so we climb with endless hope, Far up the crownless heights of hope, And each one makes himself a Jim. And rears a future front of him. —BY M. S. FOSS. GASOLINE WOOD SAWING. Call up Phone Main 32 or Farmer-61. R. A. Maltzan. The C. K. It is Not Advertising Which Survives; But the Things Which Are Advertised. THE "cleverest advertisement" you ever wrote may be quite forgotten now, even by the best friends it made for you. It may survive only in the bigger store it helped create. But it is just as certain that the bigger store of the future is to grow out of the advertising of the present as it is that the store as it now stands is the result, in large measure, of your "forgotten" advertisements. You have preserved the results of advertising. You must create new results through new advertising. WANTED—(Continued) WANTED—Furnished house, 5 or 6 rooms for two or three months; not too far out.
