EUGENE DAILY GUARD... PUBLISHED EVERY DAY OF THE WEEK... AGENTS FOR THE GUARD...

Governor Hoke Smith has woken up, and announced that if the legislative committee probing the nasty convict lease system of Georgia does not complete its work in time for the legislature, which is due to adjourn August 12, to act on its report, he will at once call an extra session. Go it, Hoke! That's the stuff.

Without going into particulars already generally known, it may be remarked that campaign conditions are especially favorable for the working of "striker" schemes; also that they know it and are making hay right along.

We take it—from what has been printed, not from personal knowledge—that the wearer of the sheath and peek-a-boo hosier who frequents the mosquito-infested territory will get all that's coming to her, and then some.

Mr. Hearst not only paid when he entered the game, but he continues to pay as he goes. Whatever else they may say of him, nobody can charge him with trying to get things for nothing.

Still, it isn't at all likely that the national committees will be so shy of coin that the spellbinders will be reduced to the necessity of walking over the territory assigned to them. Railroad tickets will be got in some way.

It is just as easy to understand why there are ugly women, when so much printed space is devoted to telling them how to become beautiful, as it is why there are poor men, when so many advertisers are telling them how to get rich.

Playing with matches in a powder magazine would be a safe pastime compared with the railroad magnates of the country attempting to juggle with the industrial situation to influence the presidential election.

The "one best bet" continues to be that your sporting friend cannot within five minutes name the gentlemen who make up the several presidential tickets now appealing for support.

It must console the European powers to know that Turkey with a constitution cannot possibly be a greater trouble-maker than it has been without one for, lo, these many years.

All fire insurance companies doing business in British Columbia seem to have been badly scorched by those awful brush fires, not to mention fatalities.

Tomorrow Colonel Bryan will be notified that he was some time ago nominated for the presidency.

THE CANDIDATE.

The candidate has smiles for all. The rich, the poor, the high, the low. For every one who has a vote. On some one later to bestow. He feels so jubilant because...

He goes among his fellow men, inviting them to have a smoke. And laughing fit to split his sides. Should some dear voter crack a joke. They like to see him spend his cash.

He never dreamed before he ran. A man could have so many friends. Not knowing that the candidate is dearly loved for what he spends, and so he takes the taffy in.

The candidate who works it right. Finds many persons to enthrall. With such supporters at his beck. He doesn't see how he can lose. But lose he very often does.

Might Serve a Purpose.

"I think I will put you on the circuit," said the vaudeville manager to the young actor who had given him a sample of his work.

"Then you like my act?" "No, I can't say that I do. In fact, it is about the worst I ever saw."

"But you said you would give me a job." "Sure I'll give you a job. I want to have you around for an emergency. In case of fire I think you would clear the house in record time."

Sleight of Hand. "Can you change a quarter?" "Yes; let me have it, and I will change it into two and eggs."

Know a Better Way. "Do you know that match cost money?" "I would the bartender at the little man who was helping himself."

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING GROWS IN FAVOR

Last year the Bureau of Navigation spent $20,000 in advertising to get recruits for the navy, according to a writer in the Baltimore American. Before repeating the experiment this year an investigation of results was made. That is the flourish as given by the investigators.

All magazine and periodical advertising produced from one-fourth to one-sixteenth of the returns in enlisted men that the daily newspaper advertising did. The most profitable newspaper advertising was the "Help Wanted." By this means recruits cost the bureau $1.86 each, as against $15 to $65 by certain classes of magazines and journals.

Other large advertisers have made important tests this year, and have decided to spend more of their money in the newspapers. Since last fall the heaviest average advertising loss of the newspapers in any city has been less than 15 per cent. In the magazines it has been over 30 per cent.

It is owing to the change of policy of the big general advertisers. There are many who think that magazine advertising has reached its zenith, and that there will be a steady decline. The shortsightedness of the magazine publishers in loading their books with many more pages of advertising than they give of reading matter has had its effect, and there are other causes, such as duplication in circulation, that have helped to turn the tide against them.

The second illustration represents her in the same jar in New York, but since there is an annual rainfall in the national metropolis of 45 inches the lovely female Beaver State tenderfoot finds herself in water well to the waist line, and she is showing some concern about the result as to the proper adjustment of her skirt, while in the New Orleans jar the rainfall has been 62 inches, and the dazzling creature from Long Tom is submerged in water to her beautiful chin, while she is gazing toward heaven and with uplifted hands imploring a higher Power for needed assistance.

The little ad is well designed, the object being, evidently, to show women how they can keep out of deep water—when they want to.

FOR MORE AND BETTER WATER. (Salem Statesman.) Not long ago a bond issue of $25,000,000 was voted upon favorably by the people of Los Angeles to improve their water system and the great project has been started. Dam are being built in the heart of the Sierra mountains, 250 miles distant, to impound water for the supply of the people. The construction of the canal, aqueduct and tunnel necessary to bring the water to the city is under way. The cost will be more than $20,000,000, and 250,000,000 gallons of water a day will be supplied. The system will bring down water to irrigate the orchards and farms of the surrounding country.

In general, the plan of the aqueduct is to be concrete, partially open, 12x14 feet, with sloping sides. It is expected that the engineers will be able to build fifty miles of the aqueduct each year.

The scheme of diversion and storage contemplates providing three reservoir sites. At the Fernando site there will be two reservoirs, the head of the San Fernando valley being the end of the conduit.

"THIS IS MY 61st BIRTHDAY. August 11 Benjamin Ryan Tillman, United States Senator from South Carolina, was born in Edgefield County, that state, August 11, 1847. In 1864 he quit school to join the Confederate army, but was stricken with a severe illness, which caused the loss of his left eye and kept him invalid for several years. It was not until 1866 that he took an active interest in politics, and then it was for the purpose of promoting legislation looking to the establishment of state institutions for agricultural education. In 1890 he was the successful candidate on the democratic ticket for governor of South Carolina and was re-elected in 1892. His term as governor was signalized by the passage of the dispensary law for the control of the liquor traffic by the state. He was the successful candidate against General Butler for the United States senate, and was re-elected in 1891 and 1897.

EUGENE'S DISCOVERY. (Pendleton Tribune.) Eugene has issued a very fetching little illustrated circular showing the comparative rainfall in Eugene, New York and New Orleans. It represents a Eugene belle standing in a glass jar with open top, of course. It has rained in this jar to the amount of 38 inches, the average rainfall in that city, and it has just comfortably reached the hips of the sweet thing who is posing as an example.

The second illustration represents her in the same jar in New York, but since there is an annual rainfall in the national metropolis of 45 inches the lovely female Beaver State tenderfoot finds herself in water well to the waist line, and she is showing some concern about the result as to the proper adjustment of her skirt, while in the New Orleans jar the rainfall has been 62 inches, and the dazzling creature from Long Tom is submerged in water to her beautiful chin, while she is gazing toward heaven and with uplifted hands imploring a higher Power for needed assistance.

Advertisements, Like Clocks, Should Keep Running

A store's advertisements tell the people what is "doing" at that store—what is new, what is inviting, why today is a good time to visit the store. People look for the ads to tell them these things just as naturally as they would look at a clock to tell the time.

Sometimes a clock does not run—sometimes a store's ad does not run. A "run-down" clock or ad are about equally unsatisfactory, unserviceable, misleading.

Careful thought about it is that a merchant who would think it absurd to have a run-down or out-of-repair clock will, sometimes, deliberately let his ad stop running. It's not wise, nor good business, nor defensible on any known grounds—but it is sometimes done.
