Portland, Aug. 13.—Receipts of livestock at the local yards this week were heavier than for some time past but there is little or no change in the market from the conditions of last week. For prime stock the demand was steady to strong in all lines, while common stuff as usual moved with less readiness. The prospect for the whole is for a rather active market the remainder of the week. Hogs continue comparatively scarce and the outlook is for a strong market all the fall. The shortage of the supply in the Pacific Coast is shown in the fact that all the coast cities are now getting supplies from the Middle West. On the other hand, cattle are being moved from the coast to the markets east of the mountains to a considerable extent to make up the shortage in that line there. Quotations ruling in the livestock market today are: Hogs—Best, $6.50@7; medium, $5.75@6; feeders, $5.50@5.75. Cattle—Best steers, $3.75@4; medium, $3.25@3.50; common, $3@3.25; cows, $2.50@3; medium, $2.25@2.50; calves, $4@5. Sheep—Best wethers, $3.50; mixed $3.00; ewes, $2.50@2.75; lambs, best trimmed, $4; untrimmed, $3.50@3.75. Big Apple Crop. An eastern correspondent in close touch with the apple situation has furnished the California Promotion Committee with a report, according to the California Fruit Grower, regarding the prospects for the season's crop throughout the country. He writes: The New England states will have a total crop about equal to last year. In Maine and Connecticut the crop will be lighter, in Massachusetts about the same and in New Hampshire and Vermont heavier. New York promises another good crop. In the valley of the Hudson river proper the quantity estimated is less than last year, but the western part of the state shows a big increase. The crop in Pennsylvania is the same as last year. In Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin it is slightly heavier. The Middle West, where the principal shipments are Ben Davis, had very few apples last year and the prospects this season are no better. Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland will do as well or better than last season. California, Montana, Washington, Idaho, Mexico, Utah and Oklahoma will have twice as many as last season. The crop in Canada does not at present appear to be as large as last year, but if the fruit reaches normal size they will probably ship as many barrels. Nova Scotia had a large crop last year and this year it will probably be less. Generally the quality of the different kinds promises good with the exception of Ben Davis, on which there is reported to be considerable scab. Taking the country as a whole, the prospects are that there will be more apples than there were a year ago. These comparisons of prospects are based on the prospects of a year ago, and while we would not venture an opinion at the present regarding market values this fall, it would appear that apples will have to be purchased on a much lower basis than they were last year to allow speculators to realize any profits. The general tenor of the Eastern trade reports is bearish, in view of the reported large crop, but this is usually the case at the beginning of the season, and until buying begins for Eastern shipment it cannot be said positively whether prices will equal last year's or fall below them. Price for Hop Picking. Forty cents a box will probably be the prevailing price for hop-picking in the Willamette valley this year. At least this is the price that has been agreed upon by the largest growers of the Independence district at a conference held Saturday, and the growers of other districts will doubtless follow suit. There has been considerable discussion among prospective pickers and growers as to what will be the prevailing price for picking this year, and many of the growers who had received letters of inquiry from their regular pickers have been unable to give them the desired information. Rumors of prices from 35 to 50 cents have been afloat, and the growers have been themselves, individually, have been as much at sea as the pickers. Owing to the low prices and unsettled condition of the hop market this year, pickers do not feel that they will be able to pay the usual price of 50 cents a box, and if this price shall prevail many growers will have to prevail their hops on the vine. Forty cents, however, has been considered a fair price for all concerned, but some growers will not pick even at that price.

Hop-Contract Decision. Salem, Or., Aug. 13.—In dismissing a suit for an injunction and overruling a motion to strike out the findings of fact in a former judgment in the case of T. A. Dovesley & Co. against Krebs Bros., late yesterday afternoon, Judge William Galloway of the Circuit Court gave his final decision in a case involving a judgment for $4000 and costs, and unless Dovesley & Co. secure a stay of execution on appeal, Krebs Bros. will ask for an execution of judgment against them for the $4000 and for costs and interest. This is the second suit brought by Krebs Bros. to recover the price of hops on a 14-cent contract for a period of five years, and 100,000 pounds of hops each year. The first suit was brought upon the contract for the 1906 crop and judgment for $4000 and costs was awarded. This was upheld by the Supreme Court. While this case was pending decision on appeal a second suit was brought on the 1907 crop for judgment for $6000, the difference between the contract price and the amount the hops were sold for on a down market, and costs. This judgment is pending decision by the Appellate Court. Firmer Tone in Cascara Bark. Because of the light post of Cascara bark this summer the market shows a somewhat firmer tone. Four cents has been paid for new bark and 5 cents offered for a carload of old bark, but holders in the country generally want higher prices. The New York Journal of Commerce of August 6 said: Cascara sagrada was in a much firmer position yesterday. None was offered from the coast and it was a matter of surmise whether the supply there had been brought under a single control or whether holders had agreed to withdraw for the time being. At any rate the effect of the situation was manifested in this market in a fractional advance, no bark being available below 7@8c, as to quality and seller.

Butter Advances. The city creameries yesterday advanced their butter prices 2 1/2 cents, making the price of the top grade 30 cents. The advance is the result of the heavy shrinkage in production which always occurs in the midsummer season. While the supply has fallen off, the demand has kept up to its normal proportions and the creameries are finding much difficulty in filling their orders. The Puget Sound markets are also at 30 cents, and the supply there is likewise under the demand. Prices in the East have an upward tendency. Eggs Are Various Quoted. There are at least half a dozen different quotations on eggs in the market district at this time. While the city creameries are selling select candied stock at 25 and 26 cents, some of the commission firms hold their best carefully candied goods at 24 to 25 cents, and at the same time other dealers say that 23 or 24 cents better represents the actual market for the best Oregon eggs. There are now considerable quantities of Eastern eggs in the local market, selling at 22 and 23 cents, and these are a factor to be reckoned with. Little Doing in Poultry. Receipts of poultry today were light, and as usual early in the week little business was done. For the present last week's prices prevail. What quotations will be the latter part of the week depends upon the size of the arrivals and the strength of the demand. No line was especially in demand today. Wheat is Firm. An effort to get wheat at 90 cents on the board of trade market yesterday failed. Ninety-four cents asked at the opening brought no response and at the close offers to sell at 92 3/4 were made but not considered. Nothing moved. There was absolutely nothing doing in the barley line. Oats jumped 6 cents from the opening but this high bid had no effect in bringing out any grain. PORTLAND MARKET QUOTATIONS. BARNSBURG FERRY BOAT SUNK BY CATTLE. Harrisburg, Aug. 12.—The county ferryboat here was sunk this forenoon. The ferryman took aboard some beef cattle whose weight caused his boat to go hard aground on the landing. He moved the cattle to the other end of the boat, where they bunched up near one side and sank the boat. No damage was done except the delay at this busy season. It is expected that the boat will make regular trips some time tomorrow.
