DR. SCHEEF AND BABY AND LADY FRIEND HAVE NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING—NEW FREE LIBRARY TALKED OF—OTHER INTERESTING NOTES

Dr. Katherine Schief and baby and a lady friend, Mrs. Weaver, narrowly escaped drowning in the Coast Fork in the vicinity of Rouse's mill Monday night. They were driving to Black Butte in a buggy behind Mrs. Schief's spirited horse and while rounding a very narrow grade on the river bank the horse shied and jumped to the side of the road, throwing the buggy over the bank into the river with the two ladies and the small child. For some moments the ladies were entangled in the buggy cover and finally extricated themselves from their perilous position and with some effort reached the bank, the water at this point being from five to six feet deep. However, aside from being severely stranded and soaking wet, they returned to Rouse's mill nearby and were given dry clothes and cared for while they recovered from the severe shock of the accident, returning to their home in this city Tuesday. It was a very narrow escape from a fatal accident.

Free Library
A meeting is called for next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the Kozy Korner, to discuss the plan of establishing a free library and reading room in this city. A committee of two from every church and organization in Cottage Grove has been appointed and it is hoped that all persons interested in the plan will come out. A free library and reading room is something that every city of this size needs, and all should not only speak favorably on the question when the opportunity affords, but they ought to attend this meeting next Wednesday evening and "push a good thing along."

Swimming Pool and Rink
W. B. Cooper, a local real estate man, is breaking ground for a new $3000 building which he will erect on Fourth street. The structure is to be occupied by a swimming pool and a skating rink. It will be two stories high and 100x80 feet. The skating rink will be upstairs, and the swimming pool, which is to be made of concrete, will occupy the lower floor and basement. A hardwood floor will be laid in the skating rink and this, combined with the size, will be appreciated by the skaters. The new building is expected to be finished within the next six weeks.

Nearly Burned to Death
Frank Chapman's little six-year-old son was badly burned at the Chapman sawmill at Divide Wednesday by pulling a small forge containing live coals over on him. He was pinioned down by the forge and rendered unconscious, several minutes passing before he was observed and removed from his perilous position, during which time he was severely burned on the left side, including the side of his face. Dr. Schief was called and relieved the little fellow from his intense sufferings and he is getting along as well as could be expected.

Miscellaneous News
On Monday evening the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Higgins, of the Klondike mill, on Moseley creek, overturned a tin cup of scalding water over herself, badly scalding her face, breast and right arm. Dr. Kime was called, who dressed the burns. He reports the little one as getting along nicely.

Mrs. Mary E. McCulloch, of Anlauf, fell down stairs and broke her left arm about three and a half inches from the shoulder. Dr. Kime was called to reduce the fracture and well reports her as getting along as well as might be expected. She is an elderly lady, 73 years of age, and is the mother of Mrs. Frank Anlauf.

The new bridge across Brumbaugh creek east of Cottage Grove was completed by Contractor L. N. Roney, accepted by the county court and the bill audited, the contract price being $1125. It will be a great convenience to the Brumbaugh creek neighborhood.

Miss Nellie Williams, of Eugene, stopped in town for a few hours on Tuesday, while enroute to her home. She had been up to Bohemia for a few days.

Through the earnest solicitation of his many friends Dr. Kime has decided to remain in Cottage Grove—Leader and Western Oregon.

WHITE STAR LINE WILL TRAIN ITS OWN OFFICERS

Liverpool, Aug. 15.—Next Thursday there will sail down the river Mersey, the clipper ship Mersey, bound for Sydney, New South Wales, with the youngest crew that ever managed a ship in the real carrying trade. She will have between fifty and sixty boys to handle the sails, square the yards, tend the wheel and do the other multitude of odds and ends that fall to the ordinary Jack Tar on a ship-rigged sailing vessel. She belongs to the White Star Line, under whose ownership she will trade to various parts of the world, as circumstances may dictate, with her individual list of freight rates and her opportunity, the same as other sailing vessels, to pay her way wherever she goes.

THE CARE OF THE EYE.

In this, our last article on the eye and its care, there are several important items which we especially wish our readers to remember.

1. The importance of having children's eyes examined by a competent refractician, whether there are symptoms of eye-trouble or not. But especially so if the little ones complain of headaches or seem dull and listless about their studies. Or if the eyelids are red and scales form over night on the margins of the lids.

2. The necessity of heeding the warnings that the eyes give when they need attention. Such warnings as blurring of the page and inability to read or sew any length of time without an effort. Pain in the eyes, headaches, nausea, and dizziness, when there is no apparent cause for it, and many other important symptoms are never failing signs of eye trouble.

3. The importance of having a very thorough and careful examination of the eyes made by a competent eye specialist when getting glasses. For the eyes are one of the most delicate structures in the body and are easily injured if not treated with the utmost care.

4. In getting spectacles it should be seen that they fit the face, that is, the pupil of the eye should look exactly through the center of the lens, otherwise a harmful prismatic effect is produced.

People who are unfortunate enough to be possessed with poor eyes, are not nearly so unfortunate as they would have been twenty or thirty years ago. Great progress has been made in the study of the eye, its defects and its corrective measures. It is in the latter, perhaps, that the most advancement has been made. New methods of lens grinding have been perfected, and new apparatus has been designed whereby results heretofore unattainable are now made possible. All combining to secure a degree of relief from eye troubles little thought of half a century ago.

Eye-glass fitting is a complicated art and requires not only comprehensive knowledge of the eye, but also the aid of delicate and costly instruments.

Lenses should, with few exceptions, be ground to fit each individual eye, and not taken from an ordinary supply case with the nearest stock lens on hand. All eyes are not cast in the same mold and each eye should be fitted according to its needs.

The importance of securing properly fitted glasses is not appreciated as it should be by the public in general, and mistakes made in improper diagnosing, prescribing and fitting, are seldom realized until too late, when irreparable damage has been done.

In my office, suite 1 to 4, New Christian Building, I have a splendid equipment of optical instruments, fully up-to-date. And I am able to give my patients the very best in all that is known for correcting abnormal conditions of the eye so far as can be done through the methods of refraction. I make a specialty of a thorough and careful examination so as to be sure that my diagnoses and treatment is correct.

A cordial invitation is extended to all, who care to know more about my work, to visit my office.

WHITE STAR LINE WILL TRAIN ITS OWN OFFICERS

Liverpool, Aug. 15.—Next Thursday there will sail down the river Mersey, the clipper ship Mersey, bound for Sydney, New South Wales, with the youngest crew that ever managed a ship in the real carrying trade. She will have between fifty and sixty boys to handle the sails, square the yards, tend the wheel and do the other multitude of odds and ends that fall to the ordinary Jack Tar on a ship-rigged sailing vessel. She belongs to the White Star Line, under whose ownership she will trade to various parts of the world, as circumstances may dictate, with her individual list of freight rates and her opportunity, the same as other sailing vessels, to pay her way wherever she goes.

This does not mean, however, that the White Star Line intends to forsake the field of ocean steamships for its carrying trade, nor yet that it means to economize by the employment of boys instead of men in its service. The fact is, it is nothing more nor less than a school to teach the youngsters the ways of seafaring life in order that the steamship fleet may continue to be manned by officers who know the handling of a ship from the rudiments up.

Under the command of the Mersey there will be an efficient nautical and educational staff, by whom the cadets will be carefully and regularly exercised and instructed, and in addition to completing their general education, they will be taught the special subjects required to qualify them for their profession. The cadets will learn about naval architecture, construction, outfit and measurements of boats, charter parties, keeping of logbooks, etc.; also on the different qualities of coal, steam engines and the rudiments of marine engines. They will work the ship, and thus learn how to take in sail, bend and unbend the canvas, make repairs, steer and take their regular turn on watch. In port they will learn about the receiving and discharging of cargo, its stowage, ventilation and general care, surveying, mooring and laying out anchors. Boat sailing and swimming also will come into the regular list of instructions in port.
