REPLIES TO CRITICS OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

(Boston Post, Aug. 4.)
To the Editor:—
Sir:—In Dr. Richard C. Cabot's dissertation on Christian Science and its cures, which appeared in McClure's Magazine and which was reviewed in your issue of Aug. 2, he declares: "For if it is true, as stated on page 129 of 'Science and Health, that health is not a condition of matter but of mind, nor can the material senses bear reliable testimony on this subject,' of course the material senses cannot be trusted when they testify that cancer, consumption, broken bones, or locomotor ataxia have been cured by Christian Science."

In reply to this statement, we would say that the evidence of the material senses, in respect to disease, yields under Christian Science treatment to a higher, better, more spiritual sense of being, consequently the patient does not need to ask the material senses to testify to or confirm the fact of the healing.

Further, Christian Science plants itself unreservedly upon the Scriptural teaching that all that God made "was very good" and that there was nothing made that He did not make. It denies the actuality of that which seems to exist and yet is no part of the divine economy. Nevertheless, it recognizes the phenomena of material sense and that sin, sickness and death are quite as real as any other material manifestation.

Dr. Cabot declares that he has "studied one hundred cases of Christian Science cures recorded in the recent volumes of the 'Christian Science Journal' and that 'putting together this evidence and comparing it with his own experience regarding the accuracy of his own patients' statements about their own diseases, his conclusions are, first, that most Christian Science cures are probably genuine; but, second, that they are not the cures of organic diseases."

Incidentally, he declares "functional diseases are no more imaginary than an ungovernable temper or a balky horse is imaginary. They are often the source of acute and long continued suffering. Indeed, I believe that there is no class of disease that gives rise to as much keen suffering." Thus the doctor pays tribute to Christian Science by somewhat conceding that it heals "real" diseases and destroys an immense amount of suffering. So far, so good.

Every Case a Fit Subject.

Proceeding, the Dr. declares: "The sharpness of this distinction between organic and functional troubles is somewhat blurred," and "organic disease is often produced by functional disease," and "such organic disease is often cured by Christian Science."

Without first experimenting with

Christian Science treatment it would doubtless be a difficult task to determine whether or not a given organic disease has been occasioned by functional disorders and is therefore according to Dr. Cabot's theory amenable to Christian Science practice. Therefore, on Dr. Cabot's authority alone, we have established the importance of at least experimenting with Christian Science.

Christian Science Cures All.

Every case of functional disease having an organic foundation can only be cured by destroying its organic foundation. Therefore, on the testimony of these two distinguished authorities, the fact is established that Christian Science cures all kinds of diseases, for it is evident that a functional disorder which originates in a defective organ cannot be cured unless the organic disease is first destroyed, for the functional disorder being an effect must of necessity reappear so long as its cause is not destroyed.

What Dr. Cabot means by "careful study" is not stated. Dr. Cabot does not make clear whether or not he made any investigation outside of a mere consideration of the wording of the testimonials. Neither is it stated why the doctor "concluded" that the 11 cases very difficult to class "probably" belong to the functional group.

Would Have An Equal Chance.

Then the organic class would have an equal chance with the functional group. Not very long ago, one medical authority went so far as to declare that many organic diseases were nervous disorders. Such an authority adds still more to the confusion, and we begin to wonder if, after all, our medical brethren know any more about the real nature and cause of the disease than Christian Scientists.

While we make this statement we are well aware of the ability of our distinguished physician to make a physical diagnosis of disease, and we are not unmindful that in this respect they possess an accomplishment to which the Christian Scientist makes no pretence whatever except what he learns by observation and experience and possibly some reading on the subject.

Statement Carries Hope.

The doctor declares "Experience shows that when a person has had many doctors, many diagnoses, many 'diseases,' or many operations, he usually turns out to be suffering from nervous prostration or some other form of functional nervous trouble." There are a great many persons in this world who have had many doctors and many diagnoses, many diseases, if not many operations, and it is kind in Dr. Cabot to point out the fact that there is hope for them in Christian Science.

The healing remedy in Christian Science is the realization of the divine power and presence which illumines the mentality of the patient and destroys his sense and fear of disease, just as the light dispels the darkness.

Other Treatments Differ.

Thus the foundation of disease is destroyed and the effects disappear from the body. Other systems of giving a mental treatment differ from Christian Science in proportion as they differ from the method just described. A Christian Scientist would not hope to succeed in curing a patient by the mere belief that the patient will get well, although he is aware that such an encouraging belief is always helpful to a patient. The method which we have described above is not, as Dr. Cabot affirms, "after Quimby."

Doubtless our critic's surmise is due to the fact that he has misunderstood the teaching and practice of Christian Science.

Dr. Quimby, according to many reliable witnesses, never recognized God in his treatment of the sick. Mr. John Chapman, a well known and reliable citizen of Bangor, Me., who knew Mr. Quimby intimately, said that he never talked about God, he was not a religious man in any sense, though a good man morally and a good citizen.

Dr. Cabot declares: "I believe that a good many warped minds... just as a certain type of crooked spine, may be helped by a sharp twist in the other direction." This being true, the doctor would logically be obliged to admit that the last twist must be in the right direction, otherwise it would not be corrective.

TWO FINES AND TEN DAYS ON STREETS

Because Glenwood Seal, six feet two in his stockings, was drunk and disorderly yesterday, he paid $20 this morning through Justice Bryson's thorough-grinding mill of justice. Jesse Arnold, another victim of liquor, was still more unfortunate and is the eleventh man in the street gang to be employed for ten days. Earl Small was also fined $2 for riding on the sidewalks after dark without a lantern.

the victim was bound to a tree. There he was found later unconscious, and all but dead. A physician who dressed the wound reported that death was but a matter of hours.

Witnesses to the burning of the shop turned in an alarm, but when the firemen reached the scene the fire had been extinguished by some of the cooler-headed members of the mob. The arrival of the militia sent the mob running helter-skelter.
