SEMI-CENTENNIAL OF FIRST CABLE MESSAGE

New York, Aug. 17.—Today is a notable one in the history of submarine telegraphy. Just fifty years ago, on August 17, 1858, the first cable message was sent across the Atlantic. The message was of 90 words, from Queen Victoria to President Buchanan. It took 67 minutes to transmit. Today some 25,000,000 words are sent by cable between America and Europe each year, and the various lines have a capacity of 100,000,000 words. But it was that little message sent fifty years ago today that afforded the first tangible proof that one of the greatest attempts of man in the field of science had succeeded.

When a little company of men, under the leadership of Cyrus W. Field, began to organize for the purpose of bringing the old world and the new within speaking distance by means of a protected thread of wire across the Atlantic, they were hooted at as madmen. Capitalists who invested their money in the scheme were thought by their friends to have become bereft of their reason. Few imagined the feat possible.

The first step in the program was to be the laying of a cable across the Gulf of St. Lawrence, from Cape Ray to Cape North. The first trial was disastrous, because of a furious storm, but in the following year the cable was successfully laid. Newfoundland was to be the western terminus. The work of laying the cable between Newfoundland and Ireland was then begun. The first attempt was a failure. After three hundred miles of the wire had been spun out the cable broke. A second and third attempt were made and finally on August 5, 1858, the eastern end of the cable was laid in Trinity Bay, Newfoundland. Twelve days later the famous messages were sent and received between Queen Victoria and President Buchanan.

But the scheme was not yet destined to bear the fruits of victory. Soon after the initial message had been sent and the press of the world had sounded loud praises in honor of the triumph, the cable was again severed and the work of years was undone. In 1865 another unsuccessful attempt was made to lay a cable, and a year later the first operative cable was completed. In 1869 the French Atlantic cable was completed, this being the first submarine cable to stretch actually from the shore of America to the shore of Europe. The landing of the American

TRAMP TRAFFIC IS ON THE INCREASE

That Eugene will rid itself of the plague of tramps by working the "vags" on the streets is the belief of Chief of Police Farrington, who now has twelve on the streets earning their living. Some of those already arrested claim that they heard in Seattle that men traveling by the brakebeam route were being pulled in Eugene, but they could not stay clear of the officers when they arrived, as the Southern Pacific is the only way to get to California.

Many of the working men of the East who have been out of employment during the winter have come West, hoping to get work in the harvest fields until the condition of the unemployed in Oregon seems worse than ever. Last week there were as many or more strange idle men in Eugene than at any time for the past nine months. Most of the wanderers are men who are just out of jobs, many of them ready to do anything, though they are often skilled at some of the trades.

OUTSIDE CAPITAL NEEDED TO BUILD MORE HOMES

With 167 buildings in course of construction Eugene's problem of furnishing houses to newcomers does not seem any nearer a solution than it was a year ago, says the Eugene correspondent of the Oregonian. There is not a good dwelling house standing idle, and the same condition applies to the demand for offices in the business section. Two large apartment houses not yet completed have every room engaged.

The scarcity of houses is so serious that the Commercial Club may begin an advertising campaign, publishing the needs of the city, the value of property, the cost of material and prices paid for dwellings, in the hope that some outside capital may be interested in helping solve the problem.

The local mills have more work than they can do, one of them running a night shift. One mill has been compelled to turn down all orders for mill work that must be completed within a month, and some large contracts will not be considered at all.

NO STRENUOUSNESS FOR MR. HARRIMAN

Klamath Falls, Or., Aug. 17.—There are no startling reports from Pelican Bay. Mr. Harriman seems content to rest in the shades and enjoy the fresh mountain air and is not attempting to emulate President Roosevelt by making trips into the mountains in search of bear. The life he is living is not of the strenuous nature, but is rather one of rest and recreation. He is content to let his sons do the hunting, while he enjoys some of the tamer sports, such as fishing and amusing himself at the pleasures that do not call for the strenuous life of Roosevelt when he goes into the mountains.

Reports from the lodge are that his life has become a sort of a routine in so far as business goes. He devotes several hours of every day to looking over and answering his telegraphic correspondence and in reading the papers that are taken to the lodge every morning. The announcement has not been made when he will terminate his visit at his mountain home.

WHEAT CROP IN LANE IS SHORT

Very conservative estimates of the wheat crop claim that the acreage in Lane county will not go higher than 15 bushels to the acre. Fields that have produced 25 bushels on the average when threshed prove to be very light. The stalks is fairly good, but the heads are poorly filled. Oats are also not showing up well.
