COUNCIL ORDERS SUIT FILED TO TEST BONDS

WILL ALSO SECURE FULL INFORMATION IN REGARD TO RITCHEY CREEK—SCORE MEMBER OF LOCAL PRESS—ROUTINE BUSINESS

The city attorney, Louis E. Bean, was ordered by the city council last night to file suit against the Willamette Valley Company, to enforce specific performance of contract for the purchase of the water plant. Immediately afterward a letter was read by Acting Recorder Bryson from A. C. Woodcock, attorney for the Willamette Valley Company, stating that the company would accept the bonds for the purchase of the plant as soon as they were proved to be legal.

Suit will be begun in the circuit court as soon as the complaint can be made out and filed. To take it to the supreme court is the intention of the council, so that the highest court in the state will have passed upon the matter.

Timber Cruisers Wanted.

The matter of sending a timber cruiser to learn how much timber there is on the headwaters of the creek provoked some opposition and more discussion.

The council wishes to know, in addition to the amount of timber thereon, the route by which the timber will have to come out, and how it is located in regard to its affecting the flow of the stream.

Councilman Fisher said that the entire information could be gotten free of charge at the Booth-Kelly Company's office. In referring to the watershed he said there were something like 5000 acres belonging to various parties on it.

Councilman Garrett spoke vigorously in favor of the cruiser plan, saying the people wished all the information that could be obtained as to the creek and conditions surrounding it. "It has been reported," he said, "that there are two hundred million feet of green timber there, but men who know say there is nothing like that amount on the water shed. There may be," he continued, "when you consider sections whose corners overlap the Ritchey creek watershed, but there is not on the watershed itself."

Mayor Matlock added more information to the general fund. He impressed the fact that there was only one considerable body of timber on the watershed, and that it was situated so that it could not affect the supply of water materially. The source of supply for Ritchey creek comes from the cliffs above the timber line, and in no way does the timber protect the springs. Moreover, he said that part of the watershed is in burns, and he thought there was no where near the amount of timber that has been represented.

It was strongly impressed upon the council, too, that what timber is there could not come out by way of the creek.

Councilman Gilbert ridiculed the idea of there being two hundred million feet of timber on Ritchey creek proper. He said that he knew a logger who said there is not over thirty million feet on Ritchey creek. And this logger had been over the ground thoroughly. He himself, while not claiming to be an authority, had cruised timber, and ventured the opinion that the logger had made a correct estimate.

At the close of the discussion Councilman Garrett moved that Councilman Gilbert, Moon and Williams be appointed as a committee to secure the information, if possible.
