BIG WELCOME TO THE RETURNING OLYMPIC ATHLETES

New York, Aug. 29.—The American winners and their team mates in the recent Olympic games in London today were given the greatest reception ever accorded a body of Americans returning from an athletic contest. The demonstration was truly a record-breaker, as befitted the occasion. State and city officials, members of the judiciary, high officers of the army and navy and thousands of men prominent in the business and official life of the metropolis took part in the big welcome, and joined in the cheering that greeted Hayes, the winner of the Marathon; John Flanagan, the mighty weight hurler; Carpenter, who was disqualified in the 400-metre run; Robbins, who finished second in that event; Martin J. Sheridan, Ralph Rose, Dan Kelly, of Oregon, and the others who represented the land of the Stars and Stripes in the international contests.

The parade was the big feature of the day. Starting at Forty-Sixth street and Broadway, the parade proceeded down Broadway to Thirty-fifth street, to Fifth avenue, to Broadway, to City hall. In addition to the victorious athletes the procession included hundreds of representatives of the athletes of the metropolitan district, troops of the regular army and the National Guard, a score of bands, numerous floats and several thousand schoolboy athletes. Conspicuous among the feature was the Marathon trophy, which was placed on a float and given a prominent position in line. Reviewing stands containing many notables were erected in Madison Square and City Hall park.

Fads and Fashions

Guard Special Service.

New York, Aug. 29.—Theatre hoods of Taffeta of mousseline in pale tints, finished with ruching on the edges and a few chiffon flowers are very dainty.

Buttons in all sizes is a favorite trimming of the season. They are covered in all materials are of pearl or metal and jewels.

A very new collar is of a band of white satin bordered at the top and base with a double-pleated frill of white tulle. This encircles the neck and makes a very becoming framework for the face.

A very dainty pendant to be worn on a fine chain is a plain heart, about the size of a 5-cent piece, thickly covered with small pearls so that the setting is not visible. Brooches and hatpins can also be found in this style.

Pretty summer frocks are of white cotton material, showing polka dots, stripes or sprigs in a color may be accompanied by a belt to match the dot or stripe. The style of the belt or girdle depends upon whether it be a tailored suit or a lingerie frock.

What is considered very smart to at the top of the collar, but is seen wearing of a single rose right in the centre of the corsage. It should match in the exact shade and size the ones in the hat.

The black velvet neckband is again being used to give the desired finish to a lace stock. Seldom is it placed at the top of the collor, but is seen at the base with the ends perhaps an inch long crossed in front and fastened with a small brooch or buckle.

Foulards are popular for summer and come in dark plum colors, blues, browns and metal grays with small all-over designs or large showy designs. They are sometimes dotted over with a small contrasting color. A foulard gown is one of the coolest and most serviceable of all summer gowns.

Cut jet bids fair to be the most fashionable thing in stones for the coming season. It is found in brooches, watch chains, barettes, hair combs, and fancy hair ornaments. A very little of the jet was seen last winter, but so great was the craze for the vivid stones that little attention was paid to anything else.

The pointed coat will be the height of fashion in the new fall models. There is a point in the back anyway, and points also on the sides and front are very much smarter. Some of the coats are cutaway in butterfly fashion, making a long, slender point in the back.

The chiffon ruches, accordeon plaited, come in all colors and are exceedingly fashionable. A novelty in them is sprays of small flowers, such as rosebuds, daisies, violets or lilies of the valley set on the supporting band, thus forming a wreath of flowers.

A pretty summer hat of leghorn was trimmed on the flower garden order, with pink roses, blue forget-me-nots and big yellow cowslips, while here and there was tucked a modest violet. Nothing could be more delightful to wear with a dimity or dotted Swiss frock.

The smartest pin to wear at the neck is the jewelled bow-knot. It has practically taken the place of the diamond horseshoe. Some of the bow-knots are set with rhinestones which make the prices popular, but those set with cut jet, garnets and amethysts are especially fashionable.

Pink is a favorite color this summer and it is seen in linen suits, gowns of crepe de chine, crêpon satin, glazed taffeta, foulards, pongees, challies and flowered muslins and lawns. There are pink chiffons, voiles, and wonderful costumes of pink broadcloth. It is certainly a pink season and the woman who can find this color becoming is wearing it in many different shades.

The Charlotte Cordray hats are made of plaitings of lace, net and the new sheer lingerie fabrics, and some are trimmed simply, with a loose bow of ribbon on one side, while others are garnished with delicately tinted flowers and soft bows of ribbon.

Linen suits in natural color are ever so chic with collar, cuffs and pockets in some brilliant shade of linen. A very smart costume was seen the other day with the trimmings of a rather brilliant green. The hat was of linen-colored straw, trimmed with green silk, and the parasol carried was of green taffeta and a polished green handle.

Th artificial hair puffs that have so long been the craze are entirely out of style. The long row of curls placed around the back of the head have been too common to be fashionable, and even the three puffs just below the crown are avoided by the well-dressen woman. However, one or two puffs of your own hair arranged on the top of the head is permissible.

Parasols of cretonne are most effective when finished at each point with a tassle which suggests the strongest note of color scheme or matches the ground work of the cretonne. These tassles are ornamental as well as fanciful. There is sometimes an ornament af braided silk of soutache at the top and also little silk balls which hang along the fringe.

Women who are going to the mountains will almost entirely abandon the lawn and linen costumes, but instead will take dresses of Scotch flannel, cream serge or certain shades of gray. Some of these dresses consist of a short skirt, bodice and loose wrap cut out on the Mandarin order, all of the same material, or a smart little suit having a very short skirt and double-breasted, hip-length coat is liked by some.

The new tight-fitting sleeves will be much in evidence the coming season on tailored gowns. On some coats thede is a slight fullness at the shoulder seam, and then they grow closer fitting all the way to the wrist. The smartest sleeves are laid in horizontal tucks or folds one overlapping the other. Many of the long, close sleeves are butoned along the outside seam from shouder to wrist, some being set in scallops or points having a button set in each.

The ever-popular frills range from the very narrow ones that edge both sides of a central plait to the wide, single ones of jabot character. The latter when worn on a colored blouse are of white with hems, or buttonholed edges in the color to match the waist. The narrow ones are sometimes of the same material as the blouse, but oftener are of a delicate tint finishing the collar, cuffs and front plait on a waist of white.
