three mills already here have been crowded with work for a long time and each is away behind on all orders, keeping builders waiting in some instances several weeks, thus retarding building operations. The plants are crowded to their utmost capacity, and are doing the best they can, but they simply cannot handle all the business that offers. The Eugene Planing Mill Company, whose plant is on Lawrence street and the railroad, have recently enlarged their plant, but this did not relieve the congestion to any extent. Doubtless the new mill, if put in, will pay from the very start.
