GREAT CONCLAVE OF CATHOLICS IN LONDON

London, Sept. 9.—No event in the history of the Roman Catholic church in England has ever brought together such a gathering of eminent dignitaries of the church as the nineteenth annual Eucharistic Congress, which was opened this evening with a solemn pontifical mass in the great Westminster cathedral. The congress will continue four days.

The Pope, by a special letter, has commended the spirit of the congress, and the message will be delivered to the delegates, consisting of more than 1900 priests, a score of archbishops, more than 100 bishops, eight cardinals and numerous missionaries and others of high orders, by Cardinal Vincent Vanutelli, a cardinal bishop of the papal curia in Rome, and the personal representative of the pontiff.

The Eucharist congress is one of the most important societies of the Catholic church. The central idea of the church is the eucharist—the living presence of Christ in the bread and wine on the altar. The eucharist is one of the seven sacraments of the church, and the most important. Out of it have grown the ritual, music, architecture of the church, and many peculiarities of Christian social life among Catholics.

The Eucharist Congress was organized nineteen years ago for the purpose of spreading devotion to the blessed sacrament. The delegates to the present congress come from the United States, Canada, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Spain, Italy, Austria, Australia and New Zealand and various countries of Asia, Africa and South America.

and divinity students in black robes. So large was the number of delegates that they practically filled the cathedral, spacious though it is, and left scant accommodation for the great throng of spectators who sought admittance.

Scarcely less notable than the distinguished prelates in attendance was the lay element. The leading Catholics among the English nobility were present, among them the Duke of Norfolk, the premier duke of England; the Marquis of Ripon, a leader in the movement to have England return to the unity of the Catholic faith; the Earl of Abingdon, the Earl of Denbigh, Lord Herries and Lord Howard of Glossop.

The American colony in London is much interested in the announcement that Cardinal Gibbons is to celebrate mass in the cathedral next Sunday. The popularity of the Baltimore prelate is expected to have much influence in winning for the United States the next meeting of the Eucharistic Congress. Through Gibbons has been the only American to have been elected to the office of president of the congress.

The archbishops and bishops wore their purple robes and berettas which, with the crimson robes of the cardinals and the darker purple of the papal delegates surrounding, made a most impressive spectacle.

MORE COMPLIMENTS FOR EUGENE

The Ashland Tidings, whose editor was here Saturday, tells of the Shriner's meeting as follows:
Eugene was the Mecca of the Mystic Shriners from all parts of Oregon Saturday, the occasion being a pilgrimage of Al Rader Temple of Portland, to the University city, and a ceremonial session was held to receive a class of over 50 candidates.

Eugene decked herself out beautifully for the occasion, the merchants, Commercial Club and citizens generally uniting to show honor to the visitors, who were impressed, not only with the elaborate public and private decorations, but with the spirit that seems to imbue the Eugene people. It is one of optimism, thrift and progress and improvement. With over five miles of hard surface pavement completed during the past two years, and miles more projected, with hundreds of buildings, from handsome five-story business blocks to modest dwellings, in process of construction now, and rising real estate values with the rapidly increasing population, Eugene is reaping the harvest of the enterprise and public spirit and push which her leading citizens have been exhibiting for several years past.
