tion of their earnings to lay up for a "rainy day." Do not understand by the above assertions that such requirements are useless. But when it has become almost absolutely necessary for a teacher to attend all such meetings as those who have supervision over them shall appoint; it should be also required of the board of education and directors that they pay their teachers such wages as will enable them to attend and have enough of their earnings left to last them until the school term begins again.

One of the arguments of Eugene V. Debs to his listeners, the workingmen, is, "You may build automobiles, but you have to walk." And a good thing it is, too, for the workingman. If every man who is compelled to toil with his hands for a living were the possessor of an auto, the entire laboring population of the country would soon all be killed off. Why, see how many of the rich automobile owners are meeting death every day. The papers are full of their obituaries. They go out in the morning full of gladness and they have enough lucre to possess a whizz-wagon a /1 buy gasoline and they come back in the gloaming at nightfall with their mangled remains in a basket. The workingman is indeed fortunate that he has not enough money to possess an automobile.

The foreign trade in automobiles illustrates in a remarkable manner the tendency of the users of such machines to become faddists. Says the San Francisco Chronicle: We imported from foreign countries automobiles to the value of $4,300,000 in 1907, and exported in the same year $5,277,847 worth of similar machines. Considering the extent of the development of the industry in this country and Europe it would seem that an exchange of products of a nearly similar character would hardly prove profitable, but it is likely to continue as long as opinions respecting the merits of particular machines are as pronounced as they are at present.

J. Adam Bede, somewhat famous as a congressional wit, was overwhelmingly defeated for renomination in the Minnesota republican primaries. The dispatches say Bede was defeated because he endorsed Speaker Cannon's policy. His alleged neglect of his district, his alleged defense of the paper trust, and other monopolies were also issues. Gompers spoke against Bede. "They got me," said Bede. "Now I'll go back to my farm and country paper. May God have mercy on Cannon's soul."

Mrs. Wm. Astor, leader of society, has surrendered the leadership of the "400," and in doing so gave a swelldom an awful jolt. In an interview in October Delaney's characterizes the functions of some of the society leaders as circusers, and criticizes the wild rush for foreigners.

Little as congress has done, according to its critics, the courts are of the opinion that it did more than it had the right to do. This will probably greatly encourage the do-nothing bunch in the next congress.

"More wheels are turning" says an article on the industrial situation, as though that settled everything. More wheels are turning in the heads of men in this town, and they are not settling anything.

One of the slickest bids for class patronage ever made was put out by the English magazine for women, which said that no man can be a gentleman who is not an obedient husband.

"Nobody's" Magazine, September, gives a splendid description of the Siuslaw country in a number of illustrated articles. Some of these are reproduced in today's Guard.

Keep on working for a greater Eugene. Success is sure to crown persistent and well-directed effort in city-building as well as almost everything else.

Shouldn't wonder if the man who said the chautauques exercised more political influence than the press had a big wad of gate-money on his person.

Turkey is said to want American capital, but the American who would invest it would furnish good proof that he didn't want it himself.

To judge from the talk he has been handing to republicans, J. J. Hill is trying to earn the title of Nose Scarer.

Candidly, don't you think that the Saturday issue of the Guard is a pretty large and interesting paper for a town the size of Eugene? Eugene may get the Carver road from Corvallis just by going after it right. Isn't it worth while? Eugene has just begun to grow.

THIS IS MY 50th BIRTHDAY

Sir Henry Norman, author, traveler, newspaper-writer and, since 1909 member of the British Parliament, was born at Leicester, England, on September 19, 1858. He received a cosmopolitan education, first in England, later in Paris, then in the United States, where he graduated from Harvard University, and finally in Germany, where he was for two years a student from Harvard, when he inaugurated the public agitation for the national preservation of Niagara Falls, which resulted in their subsequent purchase by the state of New York. He began his newspaper career on the Pall Mall Gazette. When he inherited a fortune four years later he began to travel extensively. He visited many foreign countries and wrote interesting descriptive and critical articles to various newspapers. In 1895 he became assistant-editor of the London Chronicle and in 1902 he founded 'The World's Work.' He is the author of a number of excellent books and was knighted last year.

NEWS NOTES

There were 17,359 pupils in actual attendance at the Portland public schools yesterday, which shows a gain of over the number who registered day before of over 500. It is also greatly in excess of the registration on a corresponding day of the Fall term of 1907.

T. N. Neuhansen, a special inspector of the interior department, who was prominent in the securing of evidence upon which many of the land fraud indictments in this state were based, has telegraphed his resignation to Washington. Mr. Neuhansen is retiring from the employment of the government to engage in private business in Portland.

Advertisements, Like Clocks, Should Keep Running

A store's advertisements tell the people what is "doing" at that store—what is new, what is inviting, why today is a good time to visit the store. People look for the ads to tell them these things just as naturally as they would look at a clock to tell the time.

Sometimes a clock does not run—sometimes a store's ads does not run. A "run-down" clock or ad are about equally unsatisfactory, unserviceable, misleading. Curious thing about it is that a merchant who would think it absurd to have a run-down" or out-of-repair clock will, sometimes, deliberately let his ad stop running. It's not wise, nor good business, nor defensible on any known grounds—but it is sometimes done.
