The business men of Harrisburg, says a press dispatch from that city, are doing a bigger and better business since harvest than in any fall season of late years. The farmers harvested a larger crop of grain than common, and at prices running up to 85 cents a bushel net for wheat, and 40 cents for oats, thus farmers are amply able to pay their bills and have a surplus besides. While the short crop of hops has not yielded the usual amount for picking, the sum in the aggregate is enough to materially swell the receipts of dealers.

Lloyd Mott, of Salem, passed through this city this week enroute to Philadelphia to enter the medical college. His brother, James, recently went to New York to enter a dramatic school. Both boys are unusually gifted in their respective vocations, and their careers are anticipated with interest. When William Jennings Bryan first came before the public as a presidential possibility on the Democratic ticket, both James and Lloyd Mott and their younger brother, Will, were his loyal though youthful advocates and participated in several entertainments for the nominee, who gladdened their hearts by writing them a personal letter of appreciation.—Portland Telegram.
