THE COUNTRY GIRL IN TOWN.

She is coming to the city—alone.

In the country nothing occurs. Life is about the same every day. And the girl has not yet learned that the greatest boon in life is to be content and that the quiet places are the best.

It is the monotony that tires her, she thinks. The same faces are to be seen at the church every Sunday and at the picnics. She knows this one as "Bill" and that one as "Sarah." Familiarity has bred contempt. And over all the countryside is the never varying look of things. The familiar has grown trite and finally distasteful.

But yonder in the city!

Ah, everything happens in the city! There are plenty of new faces there. The scenes change like those of a kaleidoscope. Lots of new sensations in the city! Its air is tonic. Surely life must be fuller there.

The girl is young and innocent. In her inexperience she dreams fanciful dreams. Perhaps she is ambitious to get on in the world, or impatient of restraint, or she is lured by the glamour of the town. She does not realize how safe is the sheltered life she has always lived in the quiet neighborhood.

Poor girl!

She does not realize the fact that her very virtues under strong temptation may lead to her betrayal of herself. She does not appreciate the fact that her very gentleness of nature prevents her bringing to bear upon the deceitful tempter the force of scorn which the sophisticated can summon to their aid. She does not know her own weaknesses.

Poor lassie!

Her loving disposition does not hardly know how to deny. Her sweet unselfishness scarcely is able to refuse. Every best quality of her being may lead to her undoing.

Because—

Where the defenseless chicken strays over that place circles the cruel hawk and swoops upon its prey.

Poor girl!

If she falls into the wrong set of associates and there is no one by her side to warn and guide, God help the child!

If, on the other hand, she is strong of character, wary, capable of restraint and self reliant, she will take care of herself and rise above the undercurrents of temptation.

But if not—
