FORWARD PASS MAKES SPECTACULAR PRACTICE FOR THE UNIVERSITY

Kestley Handles Throwing End Accurately—O. A. C. Watching Oregon Very Closely

From the spectacular standpoint the 'Varsity scrimmage last night was the most successful held this season. Forward pass after forward pass was executed with wonderful ability, sometimes the ball passing through the air for twenty-five yards to Michael or Kiltz.

Coach Forbes divided the squad, and made them buck each other. The squad which was equivalent to the first team did not attempt to buck the line or make off tackle plays, but depended on forward passes. Michael started in the receiving and John Kestly—a new discovery—in throwing team. Michael, while not the fastest man on the squad, plays almost a perfect game. Kestley is new to the quarterback position and makes mistakes sometimes in judgment, but, regardless of his lack of experience, handles the forward pass in practice better than either Chandler or Latourette have so far. Ten days ago he was a lesser quantity on the squad. For two nights he has handled the squad remarkably well. As well as being a good passer, he understands picking the holes in running.

Harding and Widlund, of the second team, who play guard and center, respectively, have been doing significant work. Neither man has had much experience, but with the few weeks in the moleskins they have learned to break through the 'Varsity. Their work with all that of the second team frequently seems better than the first squad, but it is not due altogether to sheer ability, but to the fact that each team knows the signals of the other.

Look Out for Signals.

The game with O. A. C. is the goal Oregon is working for this year. Oregon has two hard games before the contest; O. A. C. has none. The Corvallis eleven is laying low and keeping a line on Oregon. At every game this year they have had men to watch the 'Varsity.

As well as studying Oregon's plays, they may be studying the signal code. In four games they will certainly have solved the key to the plays. Any good football man can take down a series and understand almost any code but an absolutely arbitrary one. Many experts can with one game and solve the solution.

College News.

The students' affairs committee of the faculty will meet on the first and third Wednesdays of each month in Prof. Glenn's room.

PORTLAND MARKET REPORT

Portland, Or., Nov. 5.—"The outlook is for higher butter prices," said a city creamery man today. "In the East the surplus with which the markets were loaded for a time, when large quantities of storage product were taken out, has been largely worked off, and prices are trending upward. If this continues, and there is every reason to believe that it will, an advance in this market is inevitable. It may not come this week, but it is very likely to come soon."

The local market today was very firm, both as regards city creamery and country products, and while there is still a good deal of Eastern butter here, the supply is not such as to exert any serious weakening effect. Home production has fallen to about the minimum for the year, and not until after the first of the year will there be any material increase in the local supply.

Throughout November of last year city creamery butter sold here at 32 1-2 cents a pound, but there was a strong upward tendency during the last month of the year. On December 2 the price advanced to 35 cents and on December 13 it went to 37 1-2.

The position of the cheese market is about the same as that of butter. Many of the Oregon factories have already closed for the season, and it is expected that by the middle of the month operations generally will have been suspended. Dealers report a strong local shipping demand, and higher than current prices are expected soon.

Poultry Receipts Very Large

Poultry receipts were unusually heavy yesterday and the demand was very slow. The result was a weak market all around. Some dealers held chickens at 12 cents, but others cleaned up at 11 1-2 cents. Out-of-town shipments took up a part of the surplus.

Eggs were weak and sluggish. A few sales of Oregon ranch are still reported at 40 cents, but 37 1-2 cents is the usual quotation. The large quantity of Eastern eggs on the market has scared some of the holders and shading of prices is reported. The egg market in the East, however, is very firm.

City creameries quote a firm butter market, but some outside brands are barely steady on Front street. Cheese continues in a firm position.

Nothing Doing in Hops

The hop offices were without sign of life yesterday. Most of the local buyers came in from the country to vote and no business was transacted. It is regarded as probable that some developments will occur before the week is ended. The trade looks for a renewed demand from the East, and it would surprise no one if English orders made their appearance.
