"Build thee more stately mansions, oh, my soul! As the swift seasons roll! Leave thy low-vaulted past! Let each new temple nobler than the last, Shut thee from heaven's vault with a dome more vast, Till thou at length art free, Leaving thine outgrown self a hell by life's unresting sea."

WOMEN OF FRANCEREVOLT

The editor of one of our California exchanges declares that he is heartily in sympathy with one form of woman's rights—the right not to have to be humiliated at the marriage altar by promising to "obey" her husband. Whatever excuse existed in the dark ages for subjection of the wife to her husband does not and cannot exist in the twentieth century. It is an insult to womanhood and a travesty on the marriage relation, as conceived in this age, to bind a woman, by vows that are supposed to be sacred, to "obey" her liege lord.

Indeed, in this piping time of advanced emancipation of woman from the shackles that held her as vassal to the man's passions and whims for centuries—in this age so largely dominated by woman, it is beside the proprieties to speak of man as the liege lord of woman. Inexorably, reluctantly it may be on his part, the fact is being borne home to mere man that woman is his equal and must be regarded and treated as on an equality with, if not on a plane superior to him.

The women of France are carrying on a little crusade of their own, but not after the manner of the English suffragettes. They are not "butting in" on parliament, football style, but are quietly seeking to have repealed that article of the civil code of France which provides that "the husband must protect his wife and the wife must obey the husband." The French women declare, and truly, that this "obey" feature is a relic of barbarism and should no longer disgrace the statute books of "that dear France." More than this, the task of securing the repeal of the offending article should not be left to the fair victims. The chivalry of France should arise as one man in a Don Quixote assault upon this offensive article. Their knightly lances should pierce it until it will not hold water in the courts or customs of the French.

The visit of the Eugene delegation to Albany yesterday was a very pleasant affair, and was enjoyed by every one who participated in it. The capital of Linn county is giving evidence of a real waking up and much new building is in progress throughout the city, a condition that seems to obtain in every Western Oregon town.

A medal should be awarded T. L. Hisgen who, it may be remembered, was the Hearst candidate for something, for saying in a signed statement on what the Independence party got out of the campaign: "The party won a victory achieved by no other party." Now, Debs and Watson, what have you to say about that?

When Governor Cummins, of Iowa, goes to the senate—his going now is assured—it is expected that he and Senator Lafollette will hook up and work as a team. The result, if they do, will make readable "copy" if it makes no legislation.

One of the curiosities of politics is the confidence with which Republican congressmen turned down by their constituents are looking forward to being taken care of by the next administration, instead of going to work.

First Secretary Wright called Henry Watterson "a political swashbuckler," and now Henry comes back at him with "You're a beggar on horseback." Go it, old horses, there's always room for more polite literature."

That New York brokerage firm, against which the receiver reports valid claims of $3,500,000 and assets of only $400,000, seems to have done business on the plunging basis.

We take it that Sam Gompers cares not who does the criticizing, so long as the Denver convention re-elects him president of the American Federation of Labor.

And Von Yohnson, of Minnesota, also cheerfully faces the future, wearing one of those things that won't rub off.

Watched Fifteen Years. "For fifteen years I have watched the working of Bucklen's Arnica Salve; and it has never failed to cure an sore, boil, ulcer or burn to which it was applied. It has saved my many a doctor bill," says A. F. Hardy of East Wilton, Maine, 256 at W. A. Kuykendall's Drug Store.

W. Polders is in Corvallis, having gone there from Albany to witness the O. A. C. Whitworth football game.

COTTAGE GROVE THUGS SENTENCED TO NINE YEARS

Judge Harris Pronounces Terrible Doom Upon Hardened Criminals

Robert Harvey and Harry Murphy, the two men convicted Monday of assaulting M. V. DeWald, were sentenced this morning by Judge L. T. Harris to nine years in the penitentiary. Following the sentence the prisoners were taken to the jail, from where they were conveyed to the depot for the noon train north, on which Sheriff Bown, Marshal Snodgrass, of Cottage Grove, and George Croner took them to the penitentiary at Salem.

The assault that was made was a part of one of the most noteworthy episodes in the criminal history of South Lane county. Their object was to hold DeWald up, and when he showed fight they tried to stun or kill him.

Late in the evening they were captured by Marshal Snodgrass and a posse, after one of them had been filled with buckshot. Both men gave evidence of being professional hold-up men.

"THIS IS MY 45TH BIRTHDAY."

J. Ogden Armour, eminent as a merchant and capitalist, was born in Milwaukee, November 11, 1863, the son of the late Philip D. Armour, the pioneer of the meat packing industry in Chicago. The younger Armour, after attending Yale, entered upon a business career in his father's office in Chicago. Upon the death of his father in 1901 he succeeded to the presidency of the great firm of Armour and Company. He early showed an aptitude for business and under his management the great commercial enterprises founded by the elder Armour have continued to grow and prosper. These enterprises include, in addition to mammoth packing houses in Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, Milwaukee and other cities, an extensive chain of grain elevators. Mr. Armour is also heavily interested financially in railroads, car lines and other large industries.

A SURPRISED MINISTER.

Hyomel Cured Bronchial Catarrh After He had Given Up in Despair.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from bronchial catarrh, and had despaired of anything like a cure. Judge of my pleasant surprise when I first used Hyomel, which brought complete relief. Hyomel has been a regular godsend."—Rev. Chas. Hartley, Sardinia, Ohio.

There are many readers of the Guard, who are suffering from catarrh, either nasal or bronchial. Many of these despair of ever being cured. They have soaked their stomachs with nostrums until they are disgusted with all medicines, and are now travelling their miserable way, allowing the devilish germs of catarrh to sap them of their health, energy and vitality.

But let us reason together. Hull, the druggist, has a guaranteed remedy for catarrh, colds, coughs, bronchitis, croup, and all inflammatory diseases of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. The name of this remarkable remedy is Hyomel, and if it doesn't cure Hull Drug Co. will give you your money back.

Hyomel (pronounced High-o-mel) is medicated air; you just breathe it through the inhaler over the inflamed and germ-ridden membrane, and its soothing antiseptic properties will allay the inflammation, destroy the germs, and restore the entire respiratory tract to its normal conditions.

A complete Hyomel outfit, including a hard rubber inhaler, costs but $1.00, and an extra bottle of Hyomel, if afterwards needed, costs but 50 cents. See Hull's today about it.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A MANUSCRIPT.

I was born when my mother was nineteen years old. Her uncle, a middle aged man, had done something in a literary way, and I was turned over to him by my mother's mother to be looked over. He took me to his study and sat down with me, first sharpening his pencil with which to cut me in pieces, for I heard him say that my mother knew nothing about writing and he supposed "the thing was full of rhetorical blunders." When he began to read me he wore a bored look, but he had read but one paragraph before his expression changed. As he read on he forgot who had written me, and when he had finished he exclaimed:

"By thunder!"

Then he called my mother and her mother into his study and asked my mother:

"Where did you learn to write English correctly?"

"At school."

"School he hanged! There's something else here that you didn't learn at all. It was born in you. Send your story out just as it is. If it is appreciated it will be accepted, but I don't believe it will be. It will come back to you and keep coming back."

They took me away, and the mother said to the daughter: "Your uncle is sore because all his own manuscripts come back to him. Don't you believe him, my dear. Your story will be accepted, and you will get a good price for it."

The next day I was sent to the Globe Publishing company. I was turned over to a young fellow they called a weeder. He looked over the manuscripts which came in the morning's mail and out of the lot picked one. I heard him mention the author's name. I had heard it often before. The rest of us were put in envelopes with printed slips with the editor's name to them, saying a few very nice things and thanking our parents for sending us in. Then we were put away for awhile and when it was convenient were sent back to where we came from.

When my poor little mother saw by the bulk of the package that I had been returned to her the tears started in her eyes. Her uncle said: "I told you so. I don't believe they read a line of it. However, I know Simpson & Co. They've turned down a lot of my work, but perhaps they'll read this if I make a personal request. Let me have it tomorrow."

The next day he took me to Simpson & Co. and had a long talk about me with the editor, who was very polite and promised to give me his special attention. After my mother's uncle had gone away the editor tossed me to a weary looking man sitting at a desk covered with manuscripts and said:

"Read that."

It was two weeks before the tired looking man took me up in my turn, then ran over twenty pages of me in as many seconds and wrote on my wrapper "Declined." And so I was sent back again to my mother, who had hoped that her uncle's personal effort would insure success. She was nearly as much disappointed as at first.

And so I continued to go from one publishing house to another without acceptance. Finally I attracted the attention of an intellectual looking editor, who wrote this criticism:

"If we were looking for literature I would recommend the publication of this book. But as we are looking for 'best sellers' I would decline it."

However, my mother got nothing but the printed slip when I was returned, though it was couched in just as polite terms as the first.

Meanwhile a publisher told my mother that she would better write something "startling"—a trifle erotic, he said. So innocent was she that she thought he said erratic. She went to work and turned out my brother. Poor boy! He was deformed in frame and intellect from birth. Mother was very much ashamed of him and wouldn't acknowledge him by publishing him under her own name. But he was published under a nom de plume and proved a second best seller.

My mother continued to give me all her affection notwithstanding the fact that my brother made so much money for her. She was now deluged with requests for something from her "gifted pen." She sent me out once more, and I was accepted at once, but she refused to permit my publication under the name which had been appended to my crazy brother. The publishers would not issue me unless she consented to this. They offered her a large sum with that name to me, but she was obstinate, and so I was obliged to remain in obscurity.

My mother would write nothing more, and at last, not making any money, which she needed, she wrote the publisher who had wanted me that he could have me to publish under her fictitious name. He wrote her in reply that the public had forgotten her former book, that the character of all fiction had changed and that if he were to publish me under any name whatever he couldn't sell a thousand copies. He added, "Your first effort could only have been sold as by the author of a 'second best seller.'"

And so my only opportunity passed without my getting out into the world. My uncle, who is now old and philo-sophic, says that these "best sellers" are a development like "stars" on the stage. Other books, like other actors, must remain in obscurity, for the public can only be attracted by that which is most prominent.

I wonder if any of them know.

ELMIRA NOTES.

(Guard Special Service).

Elmira, Nov. 10.—The farmers are very busy getting in their fall grain this nice weather.

The many friends of Doris Hale are glad to hear that he is getting along so well, after being operated on for appendicitis.

Fred Yates, who has been suffering so long with a pain in his eye, has gone to Eugene for treatment.

There seems to be a lodge fever in our little burg. There are two lodges here and we hear the Royal Neighbors will organize soon.

Rev. Olson will deliver a lecture on "How to live 100 years," on next Friday night at the Woodman hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Bogart, from Washington, are visiting their daughter, Mrs. Annie Mountain.

Veda Hale spent Sunday in Elmira.

The singing at the Christian church was well attended on last Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Nonda Deming, who is quite ill at the Eugene hospital, is some better.

The schools are full to overflowing and we expect to have to build an addition to our schoolhouse if the town keeps growing.

Miss Helen Randall is home again after being gone several months.

Fred Walters was home for a few days. His wife is in a hospital at Portland, where she has undergone an operation on her knee.

The funeral of Isom Young was held this morning at his home in Fairmount. Interment was made in the I. O. O. F. cemetery. The G. A. R. conducted the ceremony at the grave.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.
