REPUTED RICH IN REALITY A CLEVER FORGER

Confesses to His Crimes and is Ready to Serve Sentence

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Peter Van Vliet, a prominent real estate dealer and clubman, for years a reputed millionaire, was arrested last night, indicted and sentenced to prison on his own confession of having obtained through forged papers, more than $700,000, arose in his cell at the county jail and asked to be taken to Joliet immediately to serve his indeterminate sentence of from one to fourteen years. For eight years he thrived on forged trust deeds and notes and he said that more than twenty-five people would suffer loss by his machinations. Most of the money in the last few years, he declared, was used in paying interest on his forgeries.

Heart to Heart Talks.

SHAME ON YOU!
"Nobody wants me. My father has gone away long ago, and mother left me in the street the other day. Mother, she wants to go back to Europe."
Thus said Willie Peterson, cripple. Taking a hitch in the leather strap which bound some clumsy braces to his poor maimed limbs, the boy told his story to the secretary of the Humane society at New York.

Man, woman, boy, girl, if you have troubles of your own, read the story. Crippled by ignorance, nearly starved, deserted by his parents, turned adrift in the streets, the lad was as lively as a morning robin. Willie Peterson fell out of bed when he was a baby, injuring his legs. Improperly attended, he was made a life cripple. This is how he faced his fate. "I can walk all right," he said, taking hold of the braces with which he has learned to hold himself up. "It hurts some, but it doesn't keep me from walking. I can get upstairs, BUT I HAVE TO WALK ON MY HANDS AND KNEES THEN!"

Poor battered midget! And YOU! You can go upstairs in three bounds, yet you whine to yourself about your petty handicaps and sniffle over your troubles. Does not the brave and cheery spirit of this maimed, half starved, deserted, but dauntless cripple shame you into silence? In the face of his fortitude either keep still or pay the penalty of losing your self respect. Who are you, whole and healthful, that you should vex the Providence of Willie Peterson with cowardly cries? You may be amazed and shocked at the revelation of selfishness and callousness in the heart of his perverser mother. How could she bring herself to abandon a brave little son like Willie Peterson, a son crippled and half orphaned? His pitiful lameness ought to have made him all the dearer.

And— You may wonder and speculate and be unable to explain by what mysterious way the strong and lovely power of fortitude ever could have grown in the poor soil of degeneracy. But—there's the boy. And you are stung into shame of yourself by the soul of this dauntless youngster of the city streets.
