PAPER TRUST AND PRICES

There is to be a print paper famine and the highest prices known in years, so the press dispatches tell us. It means that publishers are to face a condition that will force many of the weaker into bankruptcy because prices are now so high that their profits have, in many instances, been cut to nothing, due to the fact that subscription rates were fixed when print paper was much lower and now it seems impossible to raise them without serious loss of patronage.

This condition in the paper market is unquestionably traceable to the operation of the combine or trust known as the International Paper Company, controlling the larger part of the output of American mills. With a high tariff shutting out Canadian pulp and paper the trust has absolutely controlled the market and during late years has only run part of the mills in order to keep the supply and demand close together, carrying little or no surplus stock in the warehouses. Now a famine in the commodity is imminent because of the unusual drought prevailing in the East for months has caused almost a complete shut-down of the mills, and there is no immediate prospect of a change in conditions.

The trust representatives are now in Washington attempting to influence the ways and means committee to leave the tariff rates undisturbed, while Mr. Norris, representing the American Publishers' Association, is arguing for free trade, giving many figures to show the protection afforded paper manufacturers is responsible for the unreasonable prices with which the publishers are contending.

The protective tariff is the mother of trusts and it is robbing not alone the publishers of newspapers but every consumer in America. Its reduction to a plane justified by present-day conditions would do more to smash the trusts than all the suits that can be brought against the robber combines in a hundred years.

The Harney County News, ex-Speaker Frank Davey's paper and strongly Republican, contributes the following to the Statement No. 1 controversy: "The strongest reason urged to justify the violation of the pledges of Statement No. 1 legislators is the decision of the supreme court of North Dakota that such a pledge is unconstitutional and cannot be legally exacted, and can therefore be ignored without betraying any trust." There may be strictly legal truth in this, but we believe the moral reasoning is false. The Oregon candidate for the legislature took his pledge freely and voluntarily. He took his chances as to the effect such pledge would have upon his candidacy before the primaries and again at the polls. Is it not too late now for him to seek excuses to go back on it?"

A conference of the officers of the State Dairy Association at Salem has determined the details of that convention December 10th and 11th. The sessions will be held in Ye Liberty theatre, while a commodious hall has been secured for the exhibits. The Board of Trade of that city will receive exhibits and care for them so that they will be in excellent condition for display. Messrs. Wm. H. Ladd, Dr. E. N. Hutchinson, and Dr. James Withycombe are among those on the program.

Says the Coos Bay Harbor (Rep.): "If the people could have the opportunity to elect our United States senators by a direct vote that trouble between Chamberlain-Fulton forces would have been eliminated. As it is the people have spoken in favor of Governor Chamberlain and it seems to us that it would be a case of misplaced confidence if their wishes in this selection were not carried out.

The case of General Gomez proves that trouble-makers do sometimes win out. Two years ago he was in jail, charged with conspiracy against the Palma government, now he is president-elect. It is barely possible that the Cuban voters thought it would be cheaper to elect him than to have him leading a revolt.

The "Oregon Spirit" won that football game Saturday, the fighting spirit that is backed by the best brawn and brain in the Northwest. Occasionally these young Oregonians may lose, but the institution that can defeat them successively has not yet been founded in the Northwest—and it never will be.

Pay the average clergyman. The New York Press says: "The average clergyman is ostracized at 50, Oslerized at 60, canonized at 70." If there is any moral in this it is "get above the average."

The head-liner who put "Big Men for Big Deeds" over an article dealing with some individual accomplishments in the industrial world was a way off. Two sawed-off runts—Harriman and Carnegie—are world-beaters in their special lines of individual stunts.

Secretary Wright gave the Ways and Means committee, now hearing arguments on the tariff, a jolt along with some good advice when he said to them: "You ought to consider motives in weighing the arguments of those who appear here."

Here's another tariff nut for congress to crack. The National grange demands—not asks—that all raw material used in the manufacture of trust goods be placed on the free list. That would make a sizable door, all right.

It has been said that the Ohio politicians are happiest when there is a storm on. If that be true, they must be a very happy bunch just now and with prospects of becoming more so.

No more effective socialistic literature is printed than the newspaper descriptions in detail of the winter fashions in clothes and jewelry for milady's pet dog.

"THIS IS MY 43rd BIRTHDAY."

Geo. B. McClellan, mayor of the City of New York, was born in Dresden, Saxony, November 23, 1865, the son of General George B. McClellan, who was commander-in-chief of the Union army during the first year of the Civil War. While his father was governor of New Jersey the younger McClellan received his schooling in the Trenton public schools and subsequently graduated from Princeton College. He engaged in newspaper work in New York and at the same time studied law and in 1892 was admitted to the bar. In 1894 he was elected to congress and was four times honored with re-election, resigning his seat in 1903, when he was elected mayor of New York on the Democratic ticket. Mayor McClellan stands high in the councils of the national Democratic party and his name has been frequently mentioned in connection with the nomination for the vice-presidency of the United States.

SATYA DEVA IS LECTURING AT SEATTLE

High Caste Hindu Talked to His First White Woman in Eugene

Satya Deva, ex-'09, at present attending the University of Washington, is giving a series of lectures before audiences of students of that university. Hindu religion is the general topic to be covered by the lectures, says the Oregon Weekly. The first one was delivered recently on "The Place of Woman in Hindu Religion." This lecture was given last year by Deva before the Philologist Society of which he was a member. The customs affecting women differ so widely in India and America, that Deva, who is essentially of an Oriental type of mind, is often greatly shocked by things seen here. Many an Oregon co-ed has assumed an offended air upon finding that Deva was addressing her in the amused, tolerant and superior manner of a race, whose women are not considered fit to converse on equal terms with men.

Deva lived at the Dormitory and was greatly amused by the dances held here from time to time. When asked to join he would say, "Men don't dance. Only women dance."

Every event of note, was jotted down by him to transcribe for a Hindu magazine, whose correspondent he is in this country. An event especially rich in "copy" for him was the Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. joint social given last year at the Klose Tili-cum-house. Here Deva first descended to talk to a girl, and although loathe to confess it, admitted that the sensation was not altogether unpleasant.

He is undoubtedly a man of ability, and as an ardent opposer of English rule in India, may yet be heard from in Revolutionary circles.

At present he is entertaining the students at Washington, and taking down all their peculiar customs to tell to his dark-skinned brethren over-sea, just as in years past he has "written up" Oregon and Chicago. Just how an account of the recent halloween festivities in Seattle will read in Sanscrit is a matter of conjecture.

MARRIED

At the home of the bride at Grant's Pass on Monday, Nov. 23, 1908, Chris Marx, Jr., of Eugene, and Miss Hazel Hodgkinson. After a short honeymoon trip to points north they arrived in Eugene Sunday and will reside at the home of the groom's parents until they can find a suitable house to live in. Mr. Marx is associated with his brother Ralph in the ownership of the Eugene Steam Dye Works and is one of the city's most promising young men. His bride has lived here for some time, being employed as bookkeeper for the works for some time previous to the marriage. Their many friends tender congratulations.

An attractive wedding was that of Miss Inez U. Wilcox, the accomplished daughter of Mrs. R. A. Wilcox, of Portland, and Joseph F. Matlock, of Eugene, the son of a very prominent pioneer family of Oregon. The wedding took place on Tuesday afternoon in the Cathedral parlors, Father O'Hara officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Matlock will reside in Eugene, where Mr. Matlock has business interests.—Oregonian.

JAS. SANFORD STOCK FARM IS SOLD

E. E. Hyland and Chas. McFarland Purchase 1032 Acres Near Hazel Dell

Ernest E. Hyland and his brother-in-law, Charles McFarland, have purchased James Sanford's fine stock farm at Hazel Dell for $19,000 and have taken possession of the property. The farm consists of 1032 acres and is said to be one of the best tracts for stock raising in the county. There is plenty of range for the stock and a good portion of the place is wooded, there being some merchantable timber thereon. The price paid for the farm was $19,000. Messrs. Hyland and McFarland are among Lane county's best known and most progressive young men and understand the stock business thoroughly.

PERSONAL MEMOIRS OF A SILVER DOLLAR

I am a dollar. A little age worn, maybe, but still in circulation. I am proud of myself for being in circulation. I am not a tomatomato can dollar—not I.

This town is only my adopted home, but I like it and hope to remain permanently. When I came out of the mint I was adopted into a town like this in another state. But after a time I was sent off to a big city, many miles away. I turned up in small order house. For several years I stayed in that city. Millionaires bought cigars with me. I didn't like that, for I believe in the plain people.

Finally a travelling man brought me to this town and left me here. I was so glad to get back to a smaller town that I determined to make desperate efforts to stay.

One day a citizen of this town was about to send me back to that big city. I caught him looking over a mail order catalogue. Suddenly I found my voice and said to him—he was a dentist, by the way:

"Now look here, doc, if you only let me stay in this town I'll circulate around and do you lots of good. You buy a beefsteak with me, and the butcher will buy groceries, and the grocer will buy dry goods, and the dry goods merchant will pay doctor's bills with me, and the doctor will spend me with a farmer for oats to feed his buggy horse, and the farmer will buy some fresh beef from the butcher, and the butcher will come around to you and get the tooth mended. In the long run, you see, I'll be more useful to you here at home than if you'd send me away forever."

Doc said it was a mighty stiff argument. He hadn't looked at it in that light before. So he went and bought the beefsteak, and I began to circulate around home again.

Now, just suppose all the other dollars that are sent to Chicago or some other big city were kept in circulation right here at home. You could see this town grow.

HONEST. NOW.—AIN'T I RIGHT?

AN EDITOR IN HEAVEN.

(Exchange) A newspaper man died and naturally, you suppose, went to well, we know where you think, but you have another guess coming. He went to Heaven and touching the electric push button, was ushered in. He was asked what he wanted and replied: "A seat in the front row, where the whole show can be seen." "What reason have you for expecting such a request to be granted? Have you any Carnegie medals as a hero; did you vote the prohibition ticket; never ask is this but a ruff for you; you must show cause." The moulder of public opinion at so much per, promptly replied: "I was a newspaper proprietor and never inflicted a comic supplement on my readers." He was given a reserved seat on the right of the throne.
