THANKSGIVING OBSERVED BY NATION'S EXECUTIVE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—All of the members of President Roosevelt's family returned home today for their last Thanksgiving Day in the White House. At the executive mansion, as in other departments of the government service, the day was made as much of a holiday as possible. The secretaries and clerks were given the day off and the President, after an hour or so spent in his office in the early forenoon, shut up shop, as he said, and prepared to spend the remainder of the holiday with his family. This afternoon the President left the White House long enough to attend the laying of the cornerstone for the Negro Y. M. C. A. building that is to be erected at 12th and S streets.

Turkeys for the Millions. New York, November 26.—Thanks giving Day was celebrated today throughout New York more generally than last year or the year before, probably owing to the fact that business has shown marked improvement since the election. Business was practically suspended today and the usual holiday spirit seemed to pervade the city from the Harlem river to the battery. Special services in the churches formed the principal feature of the morning and the attendance was unusually large this year.

As usual on Thanksgiving Day the poor of the city were kindly remembered not only by the Salvation Army and other charitable organizations, but also by fraternal and other societies and private individuals. Several aldermen of the East Side, representing the crowded districts between the Battery and the East River, followed the time-honored custom of distributing the turkeys, chickens and the other good things among the poor of their districts.

The day was also duly observed in all the penal and charitable institutions of the city and in the numerous sectarian and other charitable institutions, homes, hospitals and asylums. The immigrants on Ellis Island were not forgotten and to many of them turkey was a great novelty. In the afternoon large bands of ragamuffins from the poor districts of the East side, clad in improvised masquerade costumes, marched through the streets and enjoyed themselves without interference on the part of the police. The program for the evening includes the annual Thanksgiving dinner of the boys in the Newsboys' home and countless smaller dinners given by political organizations and clubs. The matinee performances at the theatres were well attended and for the evening performances every single house in the city is sold out in advance.

Thanksgiving in Chicago. Chicago, Ill., November 26.—Thanksgiving is always a great day in this city, but this year the day was celebrated with even more than the usual fervor. The people seemed to think that they had some especial reasons to be thankful and they did not hesitate to give appropriate expression to their feeling of gratitude. The price of turkeys was high, but that did not seem materially to affect the consumption of that delicious fowl. Those who could afford it bought their own turkeys and for those who could not, somebody else provided turkeys. The Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America were, as usual, the leaders in charity on a large scale. They provided Thanksgiving dinners for many thousands of poor people in all parts of the city.

As in former years the prisoners in the county jail and the boys in John Worley school, were given a holiday, with turkeys and many other delicacies on their dinner table and some kind of entertainment in the afternoon. In nearly every orphan asylum, hospital old people's home, etc., the management had provided a bounteous Thanksgiving dinner for the inmates and also arranged some kind of services or celebration of a semi-religious character.

WILL HANG NEGRO WHO KILLED RIVAL

Washington, Ga., Nov. 26.—Tomorrow is the date fixed for the execution of the negro, Ed Fallin, whose trial for murder took place before the superior court here several weeks ago. Fallin's crime was the murder of Robert Johnson, another negro, of whom he was jealous because of the latter's attentions to a negress with whom Fallin was infatuated. In the early part of June Fallin slipped up to Johnson's house one night and fired on the negro while he was sitting on his porch. Johnson died the next day. The perpetrator of the deed was unknown, but as Fallin could not be found, and as the enmity existing between the two men was well known, suspicion was at once directed to the runaway negro. Rewards were offered for his capture, and after several months of hiding, Fallin was found by two other negroes and turned over to the authorities. He was captured only after a hard fight and after being wounded in the chase.
