EDWIN BOOTH RELICS WILL BE SOLD ON BLOCK

New York, Dec. 4.—Max, prominent members of the theatrical profession and a large number of admirers of the late Edwin Booth flocked to the Fifth Avenue auction rooms today to bid on a large collection of personal property that belonged to the great tragedian. The property was put on sale by Mr. Booth's daughter, Mrs. Ignatius J. Grossman, who wished to dispose of it because she wishes to make her home abroad. Included in the things placed on sale were many of the costumes, weapons, wigs and hats worn by Edwin Booth. "Hamlet's" robe of black velvet, trimmed with rare purple lace and jet, and the "Richard III" suit which Booth used when he succeeded his father in the portrayal of that character were among the lot. Other costumes placed on sale were those worn by Mr. Booth when he played with Mme. Ristori in "Macbeth," when with Salvini he drew great audiences at the Academy of Music, when with Lawrence Barrett and Modjeska he toured the country for five years, and when he played with Sir Henry Irving in England. One of the most interesting relics placed on sale was a leaden safe originally enclosed in the cornerstone of Booth's theatre at Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue, in this city. There were also wigs and beards used in "King Lear," "Richard III," "Hamlet," "Othello" and other plays. One of the things which Booth prized the most, a painting of his father from life, done nearly sixty years ago, was added to the sale.

HOUSE BURNED AT GOSHEN TODAY

Residence of H. J. Chenoweth Destroyed This Forenoon—Nothing Saved

The residence of H. J. Chenoweth, on the old Bennett place a mile south of Goshen and near the railroad was destroyed by fire this forenoon between 11 and 12 o'clock. Mr. Chenoweth is away from home, being out on Deadwood creek. The fire originated from a defective flue and had gained such headway that when first discovered that it was impossible to stay its progress. Mrs. Chenoweth was unable to get much out of the house and nearly all the contents were destroyed.

The house was a substantial and good-sized structure. The loss will be over $1200. It is not learned whether or not there was any insurance on the building or contents. The fire was raging as the north-bound passenger train passed, attracting the attention of the passengers.
