

SOCIETY

The social life of Eugene has been enlivened this week by a series of three delightful afternoons given by Mrs. R. A. Booth and Mrs. Wm. Kaykendall at the home of the former, 112 East Ninth street. On Tuesday the ladies spent the afternoon with their needlework and were favored with several delightful vocal and instrumental selections by the Misses Edith Prescott and Florence Winsor. The hostesses were assisted in serving by Miss Pauline Potter, Miss Cooby Gilstrap, Miss Claire Dunn, Miss Winifred Cookerline and Miss Barbara Booth. On Thursday a guessing contest was provided in which Mrs. Maxine Chambers won the first prize and Mrs. H. Dearborn the second. Those who assisted on Thursday were the Misses Isabel Kaykendall, Barbara Booth, Edith Winsor, Edith Prescott, Grace Larkin. Again on Friday a couple of hours were spent with needlework, during which Miss Isoline Shaver rendered a several beautiful vocal selections, accompanied by Miss Winsor. Dainty refreshments were served by the Misses Kaykendall, Dunn, Goldsmith and Booth. The decorations of the various rooms were beautiful and consisted of chrysanthemums and other cut flowers.

The invited guests on Tuesday were: Mrs. E. S. Ankeny, Mrs. Darwin Hirstow, Mrs. L. L. Chambers, Mrs. F. M. Wilbur, Mrs. A. L. Japp, Mrs. H. Welch, Mrs. Z. K. Lister, Mrs. G. O. Yoran, Miss L. A. Announcements have been received by a number of Eugene people of the marriage of Miss Leone Keys and Mr. Henry Downing Jacobs in Minneapolis, Minn., November 25th, and they are spending their honeymoon in Chicago, New York and other places of interest.

The ladies of the Episcopal church held their bazaar in the parish rooms of the church Thursday afternoon. The supper to a large number in the evening. The ladies realized a neat sum from the supper and the sale of many useful and beautiful Christmas articles.

On last Thursday evening the Methodist Aid Society, which several months ago was divided into two parts for the purpose of securing new members, was banqueted by the losing side. A most delicious supper was served at 5 o'clock in the Odd Fellows hall and there were more than ninety ladies present.

The Salmagundi Club was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Willoughby on last Tuesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer and Mrs. I. J. Wilson were the guests of the club.

A very pleasant surprise party was given Mrs. J. B. Nettleton on Tuesday evening, the occasion being her birthday. After the commotion, due to finding seating room, had subsided, Grandpa Barnum, in behalf of the crowd, presented Mrs. Nettleton with a lovely gold watch chain, which she says is doubly appreciated because she knows the good wishes of the givers went with it. The evening was delightfully spent with music and games until midnight, when a delicious lunch was served, that being part of the surprise. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Barnum, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Welke, Mr. and Mrs. Arba Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Gomph, Mr. and Mrs. John Barr, Mr. and Mrs. Merrell Pennington, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Hurd, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Spurgeon, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Barnum, Miss Agnes Day and Johnnie Day.

On December 7th No. 298 East Thirtieth street was the scene of a beautiful home wedding when Miss Florence E. Quinn, of Eugene, became the bride of Mr. Charles S. Gilson, of McMinnville. The rooms were tastefully decorated for the occasion. The bride was becomingly covered in cream silk mull, and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations. As the bride and groom marched into the parlor they were met by Rev. C. C. Curtis, who in an impressive ceremony pronounced them husband and wife. Mr. and Mrs. Gilson left on the 8:45 train for points in Eastern Oregon and will be at home in McMinnville, Oregon, after December 31st.

FADS AND FASHIONS

Guard Special Service.

New York, Dec. 12.—Winter has come in earnest and with it interest in furs. All the large and fashionable shops display quantities of furs of every kind, in sets or individual pieces, and their fur departments are working over time to satisfy the crowds of women, anxious to make their selections before the best bargains have been snapped up. Never before were furs more fashionable than at the present time, and never did the shops display a greater variety of handsome and attractive made-up furs. When one considers how greatly a handsome set of furs enhances the pleasing effect of a simple serge, cheyote or to what extent it emphasizes the splendor of a satin-finished cloth, otoman or velvet costume, the prevailing craze for furs is by no means surprising.

Comparatively few years ago furs were black, white, gray or brown and there were probably not more than half a dozen kinds of furs to choose from. Today it is different. Not only do the furriers offer a choice between more than a score of genuine kinds, a score, but with great ingenuity they have produced the most deceiving imitations and artificial varieties, as novel as they are attractive. It is really surprising what effects the furriers have been able to produce by skillful manipulation of low grade and cheap furs. One of the latest achievements is the imitation of pointed fox by sticking white tips to the long hairs of a common fox fur.

The widespread craze for long lines in feminine garb was promptly noted by the makers of furs and they were not slow in adapting their creations to the prevailing style. One of the most fashionable furriers in the United States had the happy inspiration to reproduce the graceful, long-lined Victorian line, which is quite simple and yet fulfills every requirement of line and adaptability of the present fashion. The Victorian has been eagerly adopted by the stout woman, because it conceals her too ample curves, and by the slender woman, because it helps her to emphasize the long-drawn-out slenderness of line which is the aim of every fashionable woman at present.

Pony coats are no longer regarded as correct for street use by the ultra-fashionable set, but they are almost universally worn at the workmen and country houses parties and at country clubs as a wrap to be slipped on over the white flannel morning frocks which the modish woman affects for winter garb. They are dyed black or in the natural brown tints, and lined with white-satin or broadcloth.

Three-piece fur sets are more than ever in evidence this winter, the hat having attained unusual importance among the furriers, many of whom employ expert milliners for constructing attractive fur headgear. Because of the softness about the face, there is no type of winter hat to rival that of fur, and among these none are more universally popular than the Cleo and treader turbans, which require scarcely any trimming beyond a cluster of outstanding wire brushes, with feathers, a feather aigrette or a bunch of flowers. In some of the fashionable shops five-piece sets are exhibited. They include fur wristlets, which are affected by a few of the ultra-fashionable women.

Fringe is used more extensively than ever for decorative purposes this season. Pearl fringe, composed of tiny beads, finished at the end of each strand with one large pearl, borders the tunic of the evening gown. Soft silk fringe outlines the kimono, and the afternoons gown, and heavy braid fringe is introduced in the trimming of the Directoire coat. The overskirt of one gown is cut in points, bordered with fringe, while the girle, which comes up high under the bust, has the ends knotted in front, weighted with fringe. Another gown in thick meteor crepe de chine has a scarf of chiffon, bordered with beaded fringe. The scarf is draped over the shoulders, and is held in place by a knot of soft satin.

Beige and mauve are the colors used for the fringe on a smart costume in beige serge, checked in mauve. The skirt and coat are cut of crossway material, except in the front and back, and the collar of velvet is of the inimitable type. The hat to be worn with this gown is in ottoman, trimmed with violet silk and lined with beige.

The most popular among the feathered which are used for decorating hats this season is just as it has always been, the ostrich plume. It is the most beautiful and decorative of all feathers and also the most unobjectionable from a humanitarian standpoint of view, as it is obtained from live birds without causing them great pain. There are several kinds of ostrich plumes. The one most universally used for decorating hats is the beautiful plume with three-inch flues. It is quite expensive, as large and perfect specimens are rather scarce. Then there are the "jocks," plumes resembling the kind first mentioned, but having flues only on one side of the stem. This is what is usually called a "plucked plume," although there is really nothing artificial about it. They are usually half white and half brown.

In choosing an ostrich plume, be sure to see that the stem is one piece, not made of several smaller plumes sewed or pasted together. It is in this way the people are so often deceived. On the plume there should be no paste or stitches; the flues should grow naturally from the stem and the stem itself should be strong, yet pliable.

The willow plume, the most expensive of the ostrich plumes, is a made plume. The length of the flue is acquired by tying extra flues to those already on the stem. That is to say, if you take an ordinary ostrich plume and cut the flues from a second stem, pasting them on the flues of the first plume, you will have a willow plume. Of course, the knots must be as inconspicuous as possible, and only the added ends are visible.

The chief charm of present-day culture lies in the soft, fluffy effect which is out of the question with hair that is stiff, damp or oily. Therefore the first essential is to see that the hair is in a perfectly healthy and absolutely clean condition. This rule holds steadfastly whether the arrangement be simple or elaborate.

To part the hair in the middle is just now the fancy of Parisian women, the waves being brought well down over the face, while the hair is turned abruptly back at the sides over two cunningly inserted side parts.

A marked feature of the new skirts is the shifted position of the closing. They almost invariably fasten on the left side of the back, though the bodices continue to close in the centre.
