Salem Paper Intimates U. of O. Glee Club Mixed Up in Prank

Because the cornerstone of Eaton hall, at Willamette University, was missed yesterday morning before the ceremonies attendant on the cornerstone laying, and because there are liable to be investigations and probably expulsive, some of the students intimate that the members of the Oregon University Glee Club, who were here Tuesday night, may know something of the prank, says the Salem Statesman.
The missing cornerstone caused considerable trouble among the faculty members and the sheriff's force was called. The stone was located under a pile of lumber.
The students also tied a cow in the University chapel, all of which materially assisted in a successful cornerstone laying and subsequent services in the chapel.

The Portland, Eugene & Eastern trolley car No. 3, was sent to Albany today to be used on the company's new line there. J. W. Barringer and his force of men worked till 10 o'clock last night to load the car on a Southern Pacific car in order that it might go out last night or early this morning, but it was thought best to further secure it so it would not roll off, so its departure was delayed.

E. C. Hasse, one of the two men who were arrested at Canyonville a few days ago charged with the theft of a team and buggy from Tom Bailey's livery stable in this city, was given an examination before Judge Bryson, of the justice court this afternoon. As there was no evidence to indicate that he was implicated in the theft, he was discharged from custody. Al Pander, who hired the rig and was caught with Hasse, is now in the county jail awaiting trial in the circuit court.

A first-class vaudeville performance is giving at the Bell theatre each evening. The house is crowded at every performance and everyone who sees the show is well satisfied with it. The bill Tuesday and Wednesday nights made a hit with the crowds. The Blessings in the mysterious comedy, "The Surprise Dinner," in which some startling feats of sleight of hand were performed, were especially pleasing. The Traviolas, in their hoop-rolling feat were good and the illustrated song and moving pictures were above the average. The Bell gives an hour's entertainment that is worth double the price of admission.
