DESPAIR NOT.

We were not made to pass in sorrow
Our brief existence here away,
For grief's a cloud that on the morrow
Gives promise of a brighter day.

Bright flowers decay, gay foliage
Fades
Beneath November's chilly reign;
But, robed in gayer tints, the spring
Beholds the blushing flowers
Again.

So when some grief has blighted
Hopes
Of happiness too dearly cherished
Too oft we deem that every joy
Has with departed idols perished.

However deep the wound we feel,
However great our cause of sadness,
Time rolls the clouds of grief away
And brings again our wonted gladness.

now but fairly begun and should be pushed more resolutely than ever during the present year. If all the improvements and enterprises projected at this time are carried out the year 1910 will dawn upon a real city here, far ahead of any other in the state of Oregon outside of Portland. We all know this to be the real situation and should seek to consummate, by another year of determined, united effort, the work already so well begun.

This year the Eugene & Eastern Railway should extend its lines so as to cover the entire city. Half of our people are without car service and have now waited patiently for a year or more for the company to arrange their affairs so that the needed extensions could be made. It is time now for the company to get busy and do something for those residents who live west of Willamette street.

In addition to the fortune that naturally goes with a grand daughter of D. O. Mills, the wedding presents of the Earl of Granard's bride were valued at $500,000. The hands across the sea in this case will carry back many dollars. It can do no harm to wish there will be no divorce sequel to the story.

The Guard will begin the publication tomorrow, in its Saturday and Weekly editions, of one of the newest and greatest detective stories ever written. "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," by Gaston Leroux, illustrated by John Sloan, will be found of absorbing interest from beginning to end.

Even with economy for the watchword, the house postoffice bill for the coming fiscal year carries $234,000,000. That does not mean that the mail business will cost Uncle Sam all that money. He will collect almost, but not quite that much, for postage, which will be turned into the treasury.

Judge Adams, of Cleveland, Ohio, seems to have his full share of the original Adam. He sharply turned down an excited father who appealed to him for help by telling him from the bench: "No court would attempt to interfere with a girl's sitting on the knee of her beau."

Though Carrie Nation tried hard, she did not succeed in getting into a Scotch jail, but she had better luck in England. The Scotch always did say the English were slow to appreciate a joke.

Alfonso, of Spain, isn't the first king to show an inclination to do some high-flying, but he is the first one wise enough to do it under the instruction of an acknowledged expert. Wilbur Wright has been engaged to coach him.

Congratulations would seem to de duce the state legislatures which succeeded in electing senators without any bribery talk; also to the men elected.

Don't be unreasonable. How can congress find time to legislate? When it isn't touching off some sort of fireworks, it's busy sleuthing.

If a few more of the world's high muckymucks get the airship habit, all the plans for that African trip will have to be changed.

THIS IS MY 9TH BIRTHDAY

Baroness Clifton
The Baroness Clifton, the youngest peeress of Great Britain, was born January 22, 1900, and succeeded to the barony in the same year. The barony is the oldest honor in the Bligh family, whose head is the eighth Earl of Darnley. Lady Betty Bligh, as the little baroness is popularly known, is the seventeenth holder of the barony of Clifton, which was held before her by her father, the seventh Earl of Darnley, who died without other issue. The barony was granted in 1608 by James VI and I, and therefore is open to female succession. At the time of the coronation of King Edward VII the baroness was not yet three years of age. Nevertheless she exercised her right to attend the imposing ceremony in Westminster Abbey, dressed in a gorgeous little coronation robe made for her on the lines of those of the other peeresses.

DEMONIACAL MURDER IN GERMANY

Berlin, Jan. 22.—A murder of the most appalling description is reported from Mayence. In an access of mania the student son of a wealthy wine dealer arose in the night and killed his father and three sisters, aged respectively 25, 20 and 15.

His sexagenarian father, Nicola Roewe, was for many years a member of the Reichstag, and had eighteen children, of whom seven were gathered for a family reunion in his large home in the Baunratstrasse.

Young Joseph Roewe, who is only 20 years of age, was home from his college at Bonn. On the night of the terrible crime, when the family were sleeping peacefully, he arose and prepared with strange deliberation to compass their deaths. Taking an old gun of his father's, he removed the barrel and fastened in its place, by means of a wire, a formidable blade detached from a bread-cutting machine.

Armed with this improvised weapon and a revolver he entered his father's room and killed him with a single blow, cutting open his skull. His eldest sister was also slain in her sleep, but the two younger girls woke up when he entered their room. The elder he shot through the heart and the other was struck down by a blow from the hatchet.

The maniac proceeded to mutilate the corpses of both girls until they were unrecognizable, after which the crisis of his homicidal fury having passed, he went quietly off to bed and fell asleep as if nothing had happened.

His elder brother and two younger children, sleeping in a wing of the house, were unaware of the tragedy until it was discovered by one of the maids. When the police arrived Joseph was still asleep.

An investigation shows that the young man had been mentally abnormal since his school days, and was refused for the army. He had written home from college saying that his studies gave him headaches, and that he would come home and "free his father from all cares."

HOME CURE FOR ECZEMA.

Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine, etc., Used as a Simple Wash.

It really seems strange that many people suffer year in and year out with eczema, when it is now longer a secret that oil of wintergreen mixed with thymol, glycerine, etc., makes a wash that is bound to cure.

Old, obstinate cases, it is true, cannot be cured in a few days, but there is absolutely no suffering from eczema who ever used this simple wash and did not find immediate relief that wonderfully soothing, calm, sensation that comes when the itch is taken away. Instantly upon applying a few drops of the wash remedy takes effect, the itch is laid. There is no need of excitement—the patient knows at once. Instead of trying to compound oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., in the right proportions, which is universally found to be effective. It is known as the D. D. D. Compound. It is made by D. D. D. Co., of Chicago, and long experience with this remedy given us great confidence in its merits.
