GREAT DEMONSTRATION IN FAVOR OF PRESIDENT DIAZ

PORFIRIO DIAZ.

City of Mexico, April 2.—This ancient capital today was the scene of a popular demonstration the like of which has never been witnessed here before. Many thousands of men from all parts of the country joined in the monster parade, which marched through the principal streets of the ancient town and proceeded to the national palace to salute President Diaz and urge him to accept another term. For nearly a quarter of a century President Diaz has been the idol of his country and under his wise and strong administration the country has grown and developed as few other countries in history during an equal period.

When President Diaz, who will be sixty years old next fall, announced some time ago that he desired to retire to private life and would not accept another term as president, the whole country was seized with consternation and, as numerous individual requests proved ineffective to induce Diaz to abandon his determination, a gigantic popular demonstration was decided upon, in the hope that it would induce the "Grand Old Man" of Mexico to change his mind.
For weeks preparations were made on an extensive scale, and everywhere in the republic the plans met with the most enthusiastic support.

Every ranch owner in the country sent at least ten men, fully mounted and arrayed in "charro" costume, to the capital, to take part in the demonstration, and every mine, manufacturing establishment, plantation and many commercial establishments fitted out more or less picturesquely arrayed delegations, to march in the grand parade of today. The spectacle was indescribably brilliant. The whole city was profusely decorated in the national colors and the streets, particularly along the route of march and in the vicinity of the national palace, were filled with enthusiastic thronges of people, among whom were thousands of foreigners, who had been attracted to the capital by the magnificent spectacle. Many races and nationalities and all classes and strata of the social scale were represented and all seemed to be filled with the same spirit of enthusiastic admiration for their beloved president and with the eager hope that the popular fervor would persuade him to remain at his post, at least for another term.

Although the final decision of President Diaz is still in abeyance, there are many who are convinced that his determination to retire at the end of his present term is unalterable. It is generally believed that should Diaz refuse to accept another term, his successor will probably be one of four men, three of whom are now looked upon as active candidates for the office. These four presidential possibilities are Ramon Corral, the president vice president; Jose V.
Limantour, minister of finance; General Bernardo Reyes, former minister of war and now constitutional governor of the state of Nuevo Leon; and Enrique C. Greel, former Mexican ambassador to the United States, and now constitutional governor of the state of Chihuahua.

Mr. Greel is the only one of the four men who is not charged with laying plans to succeed Diaz to the presidency. He has attracted great prominence in the political affairs of Mexico, however, and mention of his name in connection with the presidency comes from his friends and admirers in the different parts of the country.

It is generally conceded by men well informed as to the political situation here that President Diaz can practically disregard who shall succeed him as chief executive, but it is thought that he will not attempt to exercise this power. He has expressed the wish that the next president shall be chosen by popular vote. If this plan is carried out, the next campaign between the respective candidates will be exceedingly warm and exciting.

It has been charged from time to time that Mr. Corral is the political stage of President Diaz and that the latter brought him to this city from the remote state of Sonora several years ago to put him in training for the presidency. This may or may not be true, but it cannot be denied that Mr. Corral has shown himself a man of great executive ability. General Reyes is the idol of the army, and is also popular in civil circles.
He is by many considered the strongest of the candidates. Mr. Limantour is immensely wealthy and a man of acknowledged business ability. Mr.
Greel is also a man of great wealth, and has a strong following among the mine owners and men of finance throughout the republic. He enjoys great confidence and respect of the people in Mexico as well as abroad, wherever he is known.
