TEXAS RIVALS FOR WRIGHT BROTHERS

San Antonio Man Invents Machine That Promises
Success

San Antonio, Texas, April 27.—
Persons in this city and throughout Texas who have given much time and attention to the study of aerial flight assert that while the Wright brothers ship of the Wright brothers is a success, in a way, it will probably yet fall upon San Antonio to be the scene of the first truly successful flight of an aeroplane in the world's history.

J. W. Oman, of this city, has invented an aeroplane and according to his judgment in aerial navigation, his machine will accomplish what the world has been expecting ever since the first aeroplane was invented.

Dr. F. G. Fielding, of this city, famous throughout the United States as a successful navigator in balloons, and a number of other Texas scientists, are so much interested in the San Antonio man's invention that they have associated themselves with him financially, and it is the intention of the organization to have a perfected machine in readiness to make flights during the coming international exposition here.

Experiments have already been made with models of the machine, and they have proved to the entire satisfaction of the inventor the success of the mechanical principles involved. His machine, about which he does not care at this time to give out much detailed information, differs radically from all others which have thus far been exploited. It is one whereby his propellers are so arranged that his machine needs no track or long distance run in order to make a flying start. It can also alight on or rise from the water without trouble, and by an automatic arrangement balances itself while in the air without assistance from the navigator. It will be equipped with two thirty-six horsepower engines, either of which will be sufficient to run the machine alone. An equipment of four parachutes will be carried, which, in case of accident, will open and land the airship without disaster to it or its occupants. The machine can be constructed in anything from a sporting size to a military or commercial proposition.

very ill at his home near Irving. He has been unconscious for the greater part of the time during the past

Many of the residents of this part from the grip, many of them having Albany Monday afternoon, where she had been visiting for two weeks.

Mrs. J. M. Brodie, of Eugene, spent a week with Mrs. E. A. Bond.
She returned home Monday after-
