WHEREIN THERE IS NO TRUST.

There is no trust in laughter;
There is no combine here
In mirth and merry-making;
No one has cornered cheer,
No one has formed a merger
To boost the price of fun;
The price of real good nature
Is not a costly one.

There is no trust in twinkles
To gladden in your eyes;
No Harriman or Morgan
Can ever monopolize.
The sunbeams in the morning
That dance from skies above;
Though they may corner railroads,
They cannot corner love.

There is no trust in smiling;
Go laughing on your way;
The price of mirth and laughter
Is one that all can pay;
With twinkling eyes, go loving
A joke from foes or friends;
There is not trust in laughter;
Right there the combine ends.

"LIFE IS TOO CHEAP"

Human life is cheaper in this land today than it should be, is the opinion of an esteemed exchange. Industry takes a greater toll than is necessary, though there is an inevitable mortality in manufacturing which cannot be prevented by the most careful measures. Tuberculosis, bred in unsanitary conditions, in the ignorance of parents and in the hopelessness of some economic conditions, takes its tens of thousands; infectious and contagious diseases carry away more lives than one cares to contemplate, especially when physicians and workers for the common good show clearly that two-thirds of this havoc is not inevitable, but due to ignorance and carelessness.

Crime and violence take too much life in America. The smaller cities have the worst records, and the coal and iron mining regions generally rank high in the list of places more careless of human life. In fact, it is noticeable that statistics in almost every way contradict the impression that large cities are more wicked, more unsafe and more ruthless than little cities. Facts prove the opposite, and show that the big city man is, on the average, safer in his life and his property than he who lives in the smaller cities and towns.

Says the Technical World: "Nowhere are lives held so lightly as in the smaller cities of Pennsylvania. Measured by the deaths by violence human life is cheaper in Butler, Pennsylvania, where the annual rate is 379.4 per 100,000 population. Pittston, in the same state, stands second with a rate of 359.6. Iron Mountain, Mich., is third in rank with a rate of 290.7; then come McKeesport, Pa., 290.1; Shenandoah, Pa., 278.9; Pottsville, Pa., 276. Pueblo, Colo., is seventh on the list with a rate of 269.3.

"The highest rate for a large city, 190.9 per 100,000, is found in Pittsburgh. If to this is added the death rate from preventable diseases, Pittsburgh may be deemed entitled to such glory as may attach to the fact that human life is held cheaper within its boundaries than in any other civilized community."

The Guard believes that Eugene ought to have a city hall fully in keeping with its growing importance as a city. The sum of $85,000 will not be excessive when the cost of a site is deducted, and we believe that the bonds should carry with few dissenting votes. It would be poor economy to erect a cheap building which we will soon be ashamed of, and which would soon be inadequate to our needs.

A lady professor of the University of California says "men are responsible for the frippery of female dress." Rather than dispute with her we'll just let it go at that, merely remarking that she is unmarried.

Andy Carnegie says building big battleships is a blunder. Well, Andy, why should that worry you, so long as the steel trust is furnishing its share of the material, and we have not heard that it isn't?

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis had an attack of fine smallness the other day. He fined a railroad proven guilty of overworking telegraph operators the measly sum of $100.

Our war department is again up in the air—by proxy. The aeronautic experiments by the signal corps have been resumed.

Today's dispatches indicate that the deposed Sultan of Turkey will be punished severely. He is only allowed to retain eleven wives.

The showers today, while mighty good for the farmers, are rather tough on the circus.

AMBASSADOR WHITE'S DAUGHTER MARRIED

Miss Muriel White Becomes the Bride of Prussian Count Today

Paris, April 28.—Only a few relatives and intimate friends were present today at the civil ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Muriel White, daughter of Henry White, the American ambassador, and Count Hermann Schorr-Thoss, an officer of the Royal Prussian Carliassers. The ceremony was performed by the mayor of the Eighth Arrondissement, in which Ambassador White resides. The religious marriage will be celebrated tomorrow in St. Joseph's church in the Avenue Hoch, one of the most exclusive Catholic churches in Paris. The service will be simple, and will be attended only by the members of the immediate families. The bride's nieces, Miss Margaret Rutherford, the daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, and Miss Lucy Buckler, the daughter of Ambassador White's step-brother, William H. Buckler, secretary of the American legation at Madrid, will act as the bridesmaids.

Few international marriages of recent years have attracted more attention.

HENRY WHITE.

tion than that of Miss White and the Count Schorr-Thoss. The bride is a beautiful and cultured young woman, twenty-five years of age, and has been a great favorite in society both in Paris and London, where her father was long attached to the American embassy. The count, whose age is given as twenty-nine, is the eldest of four sons of Count and Countess Schorr-Thoss, of Dabrau, Prussia-Silesia, and is heir to both the title and extensive estates which the family owns in Silesia. He has an excellent record as an army officer, and for a time he held the important position of military attaché to the German embassy at Vienna.

With Miss White and Count Schorr-Thoss it was almost a case of love at first sight. The daughter of the American ambassador first met the count scarcely three months ago while visiting Mrs. Reynolds Hitt, wife of the secretary of the American embassy at Berlin. Ambassador and Mrs. White were at that time at Nice, entertaining the officers of the American fleet. The couple saw much of each other during Miss White's short visit in Berlin, and the count followed the young woman back to Paris, where he pressed his suit with such ardor that the engagement was announced a few weeks later.

The marriage contract of Miss White and Count Schorr-Thoss contains no dowry provision. It expressly stipulates that the couple shall live under what is known in Europe as the "regime of separation of property."

The Count and Countess will probably spend their honeymoon in the south of France. Later they will go to Breslau, where the Count is stationed at present, spending part of the time at one of the Count's country places in Silesia.

HONOR REMAINS OF MAN WHO LAID OUT THE CAPITAL CITY

the growth of the Federal city, now called Washington, "a revered name," wrote another Frenchman, Chastell, when visiting in 1782 at another earlier town of the same name in Connecticut; "a revered name," whose memory will undoubtedly last longer than the very city called upon to perpetuate it."

As has been the case with innumerable celebrities in all ages and all countries, the services of Major L'Enfant were but poorly appreciated and still more poorly recompensed during his lifetime. The Government records show that he never received all that was promised him for his services in laying out the site for the Federal government, though the amount in question was but $3,000.

Born in France in 1755, L'Enfant came to America with Lafayette and entered the Continental army as an engineer in 1777. He was made a captain in February, 1778, and the following year he was severely wounded at the siege of Savannah. Through the remainder of the war he served under the immediate command of Washington, and in 1783 he was made a major. He was one of the founders of the Society of the Cincinnati and designed the "order" or jewel of that organization.

In March, 1791, he was commissioned by the secretary to proceed to what is now the District of Columbia and lay out the site for the capitol. Standing on a wooded hill on the Carroll farm, L'Enfant chose the site for the capitol building. He completed the contract with the Brent quarry on Aquia creek for supplying the stone of which the original part of the capitol is built. It was L'Enfant, too, who selected the site of the President's home. He also directed the clearing of the land and the laying of the foundations for the capitol and White House.

L'Enfant did not boss the construction of the buildings, however, for on February 27, 1792, he was dismissed from the service of the government because he refused to act under the authority of the commissioners, Thomas Johnston, David Stuart and Daniel Carroll. Then arose a dispute as to the compensation L'Enfant should receive. The government paid him about $1200, and in settlement of the remainder made him an offer of an additional sum in cash and a lot on what is now Pennsylvania avenue. This offer L'Enfant declined to accept, and the claim was sent to congress, which body finally threw it out. Later the matter was compromised.

In 1812 L'Enfant was appointed professor of engineering at the West Point academy, but he declined the position. His closing years were spent quietly on his estate in Prince George's county, Maryland, where he died June 14, 1825.

MISSIONARY'S WIFE PRAISES CUTICURA

Daughter's Head Encrusted with Dandruff—Feared she Would Lose her Hair—Many Treatments were Futile—Baby had Milk-Crust.

BOTH CHILDREN CURED BY FAMOUS REMEDIES

"For several years my husband was a missionary in the Southwest, and we were living on the edge of the desert at an elevation of nearly five thousand feet. Every one in that high and dry atmosphere has more or less trouble with dandruff and my daughter's scalp became so encrusted with it that I was alarmed for fear she would lose all her hair, which was very heavy. After spending between five and six dollars for various remedies, in desperation I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After rubbing the Cuticura Ointment thoroughly into the roots of the hair, I gently combed the crust of dandruff free from the scalp, and then gave her head a thorough shampoo with the Cuticura Soap. This left the scalp beautifully clean and free from dandruff, and after the hair was dry, I again rubbed the Cuticura Ointment, this time sparingly, into the roots, and I am happy to say that the Cuticura Remedies were a complete success. My troubles with dandruff were over, although for a long time afterward I used the Cuticura Ointment as at first, after shampooing, which kept the scalp and roots of the hair moist. I have used successfully the Cuticura Remedies for so-called 'milk-crust' on baby's head, and have never found anything to equal them. You are at liberty to publish this letter, for I do sincerely believe that the Cuticura Remedies are a blessing to mankind. Mrs. J. A. Darling, 310 Fifth St., Carthage, Ohio, Jan. 20, 1908."

Cuticura Ointment is one of the most successful curatives for torturing, disfiguring humors of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, ever compounded, in proof of which a single anointing with it, preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed when necessary by a mild dose of Cuticura Resolvent (liquid or pills) is often sufficient to afford immediate relief of itching, burning and scaly humors, eczemas, irritations and inflammations, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure when all else fails.

Sold throughout the world. Potter, Drake & Co., Sole Importers, Boston, Mass.
