OREGON MEN WITH M.A.A.C.

Huston, McKinney, and Kelly---Carl Wolf and Chapman of O. A. C. also along.

The Multnomah Club has entered the following men at Seattle for the August meet:

Sprints, Harold Reid, Oliver Huston, H. A. Meier; 440-yard dash, Rube Williams; half mile, Burns; mile, Miller; high jump, K. A. Chapman; broad jump, Dan Kelly; hurdles, Forrest Smithson; weights, Henry McKinney, Carl Wolff, A. B. Conaway, Baker.

Dan Kelly is booked as a sure winner in the broad jump. He will not compete in the 100-yard dash, however, on account of a sore ankle. He is in training at his home in Baker City.

Forrest Smithson, the world's champion hurdler, will be depended upon to take care of the high sticks. He will have several crack hurdlers to compete with, but if he keeps up his stride he will have no trouble in taking the event.

In the shotput, McKinney, Wolff and Conaway can all do better than 45 feet, and will probably take at least a third place. Conaway will also be used in the 16-pound hammer-throw and the discus. Baker, lately from Cornell, will toss the hammer. He is said to be capable of doing better than 150 feet.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the heart or kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the heart or kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once and see. Sold by all dealers.

Better investigate that alarm clock proposition at J. S. Luckey's. One hundred of them to go at $1 each, with a guarantee for one year. If

FOREST FIRES LOSS INCREASE IN ACRES AND VALUE

The forest service Atlas figures that in the year 1908-7 for every thousand acres of national woodland .92 acres was destroyed by fire. In the preceding year 1.078 acres per 1,000 were burned over. But in the past year, with a report of 414,638 acres destroyed out of a total of 150,831,665 acres of forest land including alienations, it can be computed that 2.74 acres out every thousand were wiped out.

Last year the fires were worse than ever. Everybody can recall the daily reports of towns wiped out, lives lost and thousands of square miles of precious woodland wasted. It amounted to nothing less than a public calamity. The terrible visitation formed part of the subject of President Roosevelt's famous message on the conservation of natural resources. If the fertility of American soil is not to suffer surely something must be done to guard against another devastation like that of 1908, he argued.

The loss is not alone to the tracts of wooded land laid waste. The character of an entire countryside is changed by such a conflagration. Many have passed through portions of various states and seen the awful effects of a forest fire---the blackened stumps it leaves behind, the dreary waste of sterile, unproductive land.

In the national forests in 1908 lands extending 414,638 acres were burned over. The timber destroyed aggregated 232,191,000 board feet. There is food for thought in these figures. As much lumber as was utterly destroyed last year would build many a good sized town. Cut into planks of the accepted dimensions, one inch thick and one foot wide, and laid end to end, it would extend almost twice around the earth. And this too in the national forests alone---only thousands of individual lumbermen whose private interests suffered could furnish any information that would involve a real total.

In the national forests are about 200,000 men ready to turn out and fight the flames whenever necessary. This includes regulars and volunteers of all descriptions. During the forest fire season the United States Forest Service employs 1,351 rangers and guards. Each man has a certain beat to control. Taking into consideration the area of the national forests, it can be calculated that each of these "patrolmen" covers 121,506 square miles. Quite a long beat for a man even on horseback.

This is where the telephone comes in. Portable phones are made expressly for this purpose, and with their aid, each ranger is kept in touch with his entire area. Let a fire start and immediately the wires ring with the message of warning. Strapped to the back of the ranger the telephone is ever-present and quicker-than-lightning messenger.
