OREGON HAS BEST EXHIBIT AT SEATTLE

Superintendent of the Marion County Exhibit speaks of Corvallis Gazette's Knock

In regard to the Corvallis Gazette-Times' knock of the Oregon exhibit at the Seattle exposition, as recently reprinted by The Guard, W. A. Taylor, superintendent of the Marion county exhibit, writes the Salem Statesman as follows:

I noticed that the Corvallis Gazette gave the Oregon exhibit a black eye. This is the first knock we have heard and had it came from any other source we would have considered it to be serious, but coming from the source it did we give it small consideration. A county that has nothing to exhibit should not be the first to kick. If Benton county would put something on exhibition and do less kicking she would get better results.

We have hundreds of Oregon people into the Oregon building every day, and tell us it is the best exhibition on the grounds, and in my opinion the people are better judges of the exhibit than the editor of the Corvallis Gazette.

The Oregon commission is to be complimented for the grand display of Oregon products and they have done themselves proud and the great state credit. Oregon will reap great results from this exposition.

PORTLAND MARKET.

Local wheat values are showing another loss today. For track delivery lidewater exporters and millers are not offering over 95c for club, bluestem $1.00, Russian 93c, forty-fold 96¼c, Willamette Valley 95¢@96a a bushel. The difference between bluestem and fortyfold has been increased another half cent, the spread now being 3¼c a bushel.

The livestock market today was a rather quiet affair. Receipts reported at the yards were 220 cattle, 1016 sheep and 93 hogs, but a considerable portion of the mutton stuff went on to the Sound, leaving but a moderate amount for disposition in this market.

There were no developments of importance in prices. All lines held steady to firm at the last range, and the prospect is for a comparatively steady market for the remainder of the week. The cattle and hogs brought in this far this week have averaged slightly better in quality than the arrivals of some time past, but complaint is still heard of a lack of quality stock in all lines. Fancy steers and hogs are a rarity at the yards.

Hops.

While a hop crop materially under the average in size in this state this year is counted as a certainty, it is now a matter of general belief that the yield will be considerably greater than was thought possible a year ago. Members of the local trade are generally raising their estimates of a few weeks back, and it is now believed that the coming crop will total from 70,000 to 80,000 bales.

Oregon Potatoes.

New Oregon potatoes are coming in freely and the market for the time wears a weak appearance. Quotations to the growers generally range from 75c to $1 a hundred, but sales at prices under 75c have been reported this week.

Home grown cucumbers are also in good supply and prices are down, the product selling at 25c to 30c a dozen.

Fancy Oregon tomatoes are selling at 75c to $1 a box, while inferior California products go at 40c to 50c.

Cantaloupes Are Higher.

Higher prices are ruling in the cantaloupe market here as a result of the high figures in the south. Bales "cants" have made their appearance, and are showing very strong quality. However, there is an extreme scarcity of good cantaloupes while there is a surplus of poor and indifferent quality. Hawkers are the principal buyers of the cheaper stuff, which is high at any price.

CARMODY WILL PLOW WITH TRACTION ENGINE

Will Make Eight Furrows at Once—Will Be Used on Farm West of Eugene

John Carmody, who owns a big farm eight miles west of Eugene, this morning received from the factory a big traction engine which will be used to plow his big grain fields. Accompanying the engine was an eight-disc plow, that many furrows being turned at once. The engine is a sixteen-horse power Taylor and Maitman make and is a powerful machine.

"TRUTHFUL GRAVEYARD" MIGHT HELP SOME

(Medford Tribune)

July Sunset contains an excellent story by the author of "Pigs is Pigs," humorously describing how the civic pride and public spirit of a city was awakened and an era of progress inaugurated by the establishment of "Thompson's Truthful Graveyard."

Thompson, a new arrival, observing the close-fisted short-sighted narrow and selfish policy of the principal property owners, men who had grown rich in the community, yet would do nothing to upbuild the city, saw that what was needed was a few funerals. Unable to furnish these he did the next best thing—he started his "truthful cemetery" right across the road from the city's unkept burial ground.

Every week Thompson planted a white tombstone with the name of a prominent citizen printed in black letters upon it. The place for the truthful epitaph was left blank. Gossip kept busy rehearsing the meanness of the citizen named, and guessing what truth would be inscribed, and who would be the next to be honored with a tombstone.

When the cemetery was pretty well filled with gravestones, the daughter of one of the leading citizens, "the worst type of the small town millionaire," who was ill, visited Thompson in an effort to bribe him in case her father died, thinking the epitaphs a blackmailing scheme. He showed her his "model graveyard" with the names of fictitious citizens with epitaphs recording their deeds for the public good. She entered into the spirit of the work, and it was not long before, under her father's name, was printed the following epitaph: "Gave $10,000 for a Children's Hospital."

The example was contagious, and soon under the names of other leading citizens were inscribed such epitaphs as the following: "Donated land for factory site," "Gave $5,000 for public library," "Donated railroad right-of-way," "Subscribed $1000 for cemetery improvement," etc., and the leading citizens began to show such public spirit that the city began to grow, and the era of progress was on.

"Truthful graveyards" could be worked to advantage in many Oregon towns, where funerals are badly needed among the mossbacks, especially in the Willamette Valley towns, where, if the needed funerals actually took place, there would be no leading citizens left, and but few surviving residents.

LOST VALLEY NEWS.

(Special Correspondence)

Lost Valley, Aug. 2.—We attribute the scarcity of news to the fact that everyone is so busy in their grain harvest to do anything which would pass as news.

Wm. Williams and family went to Fall Creek blackberrying last week. They report excellent success.

H. M. Parvin is preparing to start his threshing outfit next week. He will add a cook wagon to his outfit this season.

A. B. Addington and T. H. Fenton made a three days' trip to Point Lookout last week, fishing. They reported over one hundred "red-sides." The boys say they saw some deer—but, well it was closed season when they were out, so of course they didn't (?)

After the Baptist meeting Sunday the ordinance of Baptism was administered to a candidate.

Miss Anna Haskell, of Harrisburg, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Ruby Fate.

Mrs. Ruth Parker has returned home with her son, Fred.

Mr. B. E. Williams has gone to Eugene where he has a position as engineer for Carson Mathews.

Mr. Keever and family, of Bend, Oregon, were visiting with his daughters, Mrs. B. E. Williams and Miss Grace Keever, last week.

Word has been received from Neil Mooney and Basil Parker. They say they are at Summer Lake shoveling alfalfa. They think that district is well named, from the excessive heat.
