WHAT FUTURE WILL BRING TO UNITED STATES

Great Era of Prosperity Ahead for the United States—Must Learn to Think in Billions

Unless the unforeseen occurs the decade upon which the United States is now entering promises to be one of unexampled prosperity. It will in reality be a decade in which the country must learn to think in billions, for if the rate of increase of the ten years past is maintained, as is probable, the statistical totals, most of them, will be found rapidly ascending the billion column. Naturally, when that occurs, the odium of the billion dollar congress will disappear. The fact is the United States is a rapidly growing giant among the nations, and it is still far from having attained the size to which it is destined.

The statistical expert of the Manufacturer's Record has been figuring out what is going to happen within the next ten years of the nation's progress, and the very vastness of the conclusions he reaches makes a startling exhibit of the country's financial and industrial power. He estimates that in 1918 the total wealth of the country will be the enormous sum of $200,000,000,000. In 1890 it was $65,000,000,000, and the estimate for 1918 is based upon the average annual rate of increase from 1890 to 1908. Of course, the human mind can grasp this huge total only the vaguest way. To the ordinary man it means superlative vastness; it is an exclamation, not a clearly defined idea.

The population for 1918 is estimated at 106 million, bank deposits $30,000,000,000, value of agricultural products at $16,800,000,000, capital and products of manufacturers $62,000,000,000, gross earnings of railroads $4,000,000,000, with a mileage of 284,000, and freight mileage of 422,000,000,000.

But while this optimistic prediction is dazzling in its brilliancy, it must not be forgotten that there will come with this expansion of industry great problems, that will tax the wisdom of the statesmen to the utmost. It will make acute the question of regulating the corporations; it will create new and pressing demands upon the government for the improvement of waterways in connection with intricate transportation problems; it will call for largely increased taxes, perhaps by new methods, and with enhanced prices of commodities it will make critical in many ways the present system of the economic distribution of wealth. All signs point to a period of economic adjustment to new conditions.

MEAT TRUST TO INVADE EUGENE DURING WINTER

When Swift Plant Is Completed Local Slaughterers Must Go

Eugene, in connection with other Oregon towns, will probably be invaded by the meat trust next winter, and all the meat that the people eat will be killed in Portland or Seattle and brought to the local shops in refrigerator cars.

The invasion will probably begin with the completion of the Swift plant in Portland, thought a Seattle firm last autumn, investigated the field with the intention of shipping refrigerated beef, mutton and pork to the market in Oregon towns.

So hard is the competition of the "trust" in the East that local slaughterers have wholly surrendered their little business to the big companies. The so-called "trust" will buy the cattle for more than local men will pay, ship them to Portland to its plant, butcher them, and then sell cheaper than the little man.

At present Machen Perkins of Springfield, are in the slaughter business on a large scale. They butcher for the Booth-Keay Company and for the Springfield market and at times for four Eugene markets.

President of Chicago Fair Says Seattle Exposition is More Beautiful Than Others

Seattle, Aug. 14.—The Alaska-Tulsa-Pacific exposition buildings are more beautiful in point of architectural design and substantial construction, taken on the whole, than were the buildings of the Chicago world's fair, was the tribute of Lyman J. Gage, who was president of the corporation that evolved, planned and produced the Chicago world's fair, and former secretary of the treasury, under President McKinley. Mr. Gage had not been in Seattle for 12 years.

"I was on my way home to San Diego after a long Eastern trip, and being much interested in large expositions, thought I would stop off at Seattle for a day or two with my young granddaughter, take in the Seattle exposition and leave for home without attracting much attention," said Mr. Gage on August 8, during his visit to Seattle.
