THE SMART CHILDREN

The other night I took a walk and called on Jinx, across the block. The home of Jinx was full of boys and girls and forty kinds of noise. Dad Jinx was good, and kind, and straight; he let the children go their gait; he never spoke a sentence cross, he never showed that he was the boss, and so his home, as neighbors know, was like the ringing wild beast show. We tried to talk about the crops; the children raised their flimsy yawns; they hunted up a Thomas cat, and placed it in my stovepipe hat; they jarred me with a carpet tack, and poured ice water down my back; my long coat tails they set afire, and this aroused my slumbering ire. I rose, majestic in my wrath, and through those children mowed a path; I smote them sorely, hip and thigh, and piled them in the woodshed; I threw their father in the well, and fired his cottage with a yell. Some rigid moralists, I hear, have said my course was too severe, but their rebukes cannot affright—my conscience tells me I was right.

STATISTICS OF AERONAUTICS

The intense and world-wide interest in aeronautics is reflected in the enthusiasm with which representatives of five nations are contesting for the International aviation cup at Rheims, says the New York Herald.

Forty-four machines were officially entered for the contests. Under the rules governing the contest for the international cup only three pilots are allowed each nation, and as France had thirteen aspirants, preliminary elimination contests were necessary.

This gathering of the most experienced aviators of all nations and the comparison of the various machines brought together must wonderfully increase popular interest in the twentieth century art and give great stimulus to its inventors and practitioners.

Meanwhile ballooning still has its devoted adherents, and it is increasing in favor as an exhilarating sport. It has its uses, as demonstrated by the feat of Count Zeppelin, but for practical purposes it is generally conceded that the future of aerial navigation lies in the heavier-than-air machines.

The two Italians who on Tuesday last ascended in the balloon Albatross to a height of 11,800 metres appear to have made a new record. The balloon Sirins, which a few days ago ascended from Chamonix, France, and crossed the Alps, reached an altitude of 18,373 feet, or less than three and a half miles. In a trip over Mount Blanc and the Alps, made three years ago by two Italians, a height of 20,500 feet was reached, and the lives of the balloonists in the rarified atmosphere were preserved by their supply of oxygen.

Hitherto the record for height, however, has been held by the two Englishmen, who in 1867 ascended 37,000 feet, being a little more than seven miles. The Albatross, with Lieutenant Mina, of the Italian army, and Sig. Placenza, is reported in a recent cable dispatch as having reached an elevation of seven and a third miles, which is new high-water—or high-air—mark. An ample supply of oxygen sustained them at this great height, at which the temperature was 24 degrees Fahrenheit below zero.

A self-registering balloon sent from Paris some years ago without passenger or weight, ascended 52,490 feet, and the height it is possible for a human being to reach in the upper air remains to be decided.

ADVERTISING EXPERIENCE MEETING

Advertising in all its phases, both in relation to the newspapers and magazines having space to sell and the business interests of the country which spend millions of dollars in advertising their wares, will be discussed during the fifth annual session of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, which was opened in Louisville, Ky., yesterday. All of the large cities of the country having advertising clubs are represented in the convention.

One of the most interesting features of the session will be the addresses by great advertisers who have made fortunes through the magic of printers' ink. One of these is Frank Van Camp, of Indianapolis, who spends two million dollars a year to advertise his milk, beans, and other food products.

In telling of what advertising has done for him, Mr. Van Camp cites this instance: "I made arrangements to spend $100,000 in one week in Greater New York alone, and before the week was out I had to cut out advertising and give day and night orders to my factories."

That is why Mr. Van Camp is qualified to speak on "Advertising, What It Is, and Its Effect on the Consumer."

Hugh Chalmers was getting $72,000 a year as advertising and sales manager of the National Cash Register Company when he left that job to take the presidency of the Chalmers-Detroit Company.

"I didn't know anything about automobiles, but I did know something about advertising," explained Chalmers naively.

He developed an idea for a new type of car, spent the modest sum of $28,000 in a week to let the country know about it—and sold 984 machines as a result. What he thinks of advertising will be told under the title of "Advertising and Salesmanship."

The big business men of the country, who have come to know the necessity of wise expenditures in advertising, will meet with the convention along with the "ad" writers and the agency men.

Up-to-the-minute steamships out of New York are now equipped with wireless and tickers, thus enabling the gamblers to go to Europe without missing a whirl of the wheel in the Wall street game.

Now is the accepted time to boost. The advancement of the past three years in Eugene should be an incentive to put forth still more strenuous efforts to build up the material interests of the city.

Not so surprising, when you stop to think, that an unusual number of congressmen should be spending the recess abroad, instead of at home. They doubtless have their reasons.

Notwithstanding the activity of the airship companies, St. Louis and Kansas City are to have a 250-mile airline trolley road at an estimated cost of $15,000,000.

Boston does not appear to have been as badly "skeered" by an army attack as it was "once upon a time" by an imaginary attack by an imaginary Spanish fleet.

A Chicago preacher thinks Sunday baseball should be opened with prayer. There are also times when the umpire would like to have somebody pray for him.

From the talk of other railroads to pass under Harriman's control, we take it that his hired men have been onto their jobs while the boss was in Europe.

Maybe Taft purposes to have each census enumerator accompanied by a secret service man to see that he doesn't mix politics with his statistics.

Give the weather bureau the credit of making the right guess occasionally. Yesterday's prediction said showers.

SPRINGFIELD AND VICINITY

LOTS OF WHEAT BEING RECEIVED AT MILL

Three thousand bushels of wheat was the amount taken in at the Springfield mill yesterday. From 2 in the morning until late in the evening a string of wagons kept Miller Noel busy unloading and weighing the sacks. At one time the string of wagons awaiting their turn was two blocks long. Most of yesterday's wheat came from near Irving, the farmers there having pooled and sold their wheat together. The grain is of an excellent quality, part of it being the bluestem hard wheat, which when mixed with the soft, makes a very desirable flour. This hard wheat is grown in Washington and Eastern Oregon altogether, and is much preferred to the soft wheat. The price paid at the mill ranges between 95 cents and a dollar a bushel.

WANT LIGHTS FROM END OF CARLINE

The Springfield Commercial Club is trying to make arrangements with the Willamette Valley Company to place a string of lights from the end of the car line in West Springfield along the county road and across the bridge into Springfield. Mayor M. M. Peery has been appointed to confer with the company on this matter.

The days are growing noticeably shorter now, and those coming home on the cars in the evening have to pick their way along the county road and this winter the mud will be very disagreeable in the dark. A great many living in Springfield have their business or work in Eugene, and vice versa. The company has wire along the road and it will be a very simple matter to place these lights at certain intervals.

MORE SURVEYORS GO UP THE LINE

Another surveying crew was added to the present force of engineers above Natron. The new party, consisting of eleven men under W. P. Drumm, went up yesterday. They make their headquarters at Jacoby's, above Jasper. This makes three district engineers with crews on this end of the line. They are sometimes known as resident engineers, but the Southern Pacific Company recognizes them only under the general term of assistant engineers. For instance, Hood is chief engineer of the company, Hoey is an assistant, also Drumm. At present Russell is located at Jasper, Drumm at Jacoby's, and Bedoff at Lowell. The work of

SHAKE-UP IN S. P. DEPOT FORCE

There has been a little shake-up in the force at the Southern Pacific depot this week. C. A. Farris has been appointed as station agent in place of E. P. Horton, who has left. Mr. Farris, however, has been called East through the sickness of his brother, and leaves for Des Moines, Iowa, this afternoon. While he is absent the office will be in the hands of Mr. Jackson, the telegraph operator. Mr. Farris is an experienced railroad man, having until recently been connected with the Union Pacific in Kansas.

Railroad Supplies Coming
Large quantities of railroad construction material and supplies keep coming in every day. The materials are all new and of the best quality. Sixteen head of heavy draft horses were taken to the scene of operations this morning.

Notes and News
One thing that is quite noticeable is the amount of cleaning up that is being done about Springfield. Nearly everywhere one goes one can see some proud property owner out with a scythe or rake, cutting the long grass in front of his house or picking up the trash and building a fire to there were several trash fires and the smoke was quite noticeable.

A surveyor is to be built back of the planer to carry away the refuse. Several men are at work clearing room for it. Quite a cut has to be made into the hill.

Mrs. Nancy Casteel died at the home of her son, C. N. Casteel, this morning at 8:30. "Grandma" Casteel was an old resident here, being among the first settlers, and was very well known. She was 79 years old, and her death was due to old age. The funeral will probably be held tomorrow afternoon.

Miss Josephine Herndon, who has been visiting here with her brother for the past two months, returned to her home at Ashland today.
