PRESIDENT RECOMMENDS NEW BUILDINGS

At Least Two New Structures Necessary at University of Oregon

Besides raising the salaries of Professors Straub and Young, as mentioned in Saturday's Guard, the board of regents of the University of Oregon at their semi-annual session Saturday afternoon advanced other salaries as follows:

Trainer "Bill" Hayward from $1500 to $2000; Professor Timothy Cloran, $1600 to $1800; Dr. F. L. Shinn, Professor J. P. Boyard and Dr. Berntha Stuart, physical instructor for women, $1400 to $1600; Dr. H. B. Leonard and James Gilbert, $1200 to $1400; and Gustav Buchen, $1000 to $1300. All raises will increase the year's payroll a little over $3000.

Professor Hawthorne to Retire.

After 24 years as professor of psychology at Oregon and several years at O. A. C., Professor B. J. Hawthorne will go on the retired list in June with a $1600 annual pension from the Carnegie fund. Samuel E. Elliot, son of Rev. T. L. Elliot, of Portland, an Oxford graduate, was elected to succeed him.

A school of education to teach pedagogy and training and to handle the Summer and correspondence schools was authorized, with Dr. H. D. Sheldon as dean. Departments of zoology, botany and geology were also provided. The School of Medicine in Portland was voted $2500.

President Campbell estimated next year's budget would include $33,320 for salaries, with miscellaneous expenses of about $24,000.

Two New Buildings.

In his annual report, which was adopted, President Campbell declared that the great increase in enrollment has made absolutely necessary the erection of two new college buildings, one an administration and auditorium building and the other for recitation purposes.

"Every inch of present space is being utilized," said President Campbell, "and some inconvenience is resulting from lack of room. If the University continues to maintain a normal rate of growth, which is indicated by every present condition in the state, the enrollment will reach 1000 students in the collegiate department within the next three or four years. The experience of other state universities serves as a warning against the danger of over-congestion of students in buildings inadequate for their housing."

More Money Needed.

President Campbell also recommended that comprehensive plans be provided at once for laying off all the grounds belonging to the University and determination of location and style of architecture for future buildings.

Though these recommendations were adopted by the regents since the present university appropriation of $125,000 yearly is almost entirely utilized, money for the buildings required must be secured from the Legislature.

Attendance Figures.

Interesting figures on attendance at the university were given by the president. In all departments, including the schools of law and medicine at Portland, there are 1170 students. Of these, 620 are now enrolled in the collegiate and graduate departments at Eugene, an increase of more than 12 per cent over last year and 54 per cent over four years ago, when only 325 attended the university.

Not including the music and correspondence schools, 23 different Oregon counties and 12 different states are represented in the registration. Multnomah leads with 171 students, and Lane second with 141. One hundred twenty-two students are taking engineering courses. In all departments, 450 courses are offered during the academic year.
