Are You Contemplating Building a Home?

In no place is the selection of the right and well-adapted place to build your home of so much importance as here in Oregon; on your selection will depend largely the health of your family, your pleasures, your happiness and your prosperity. The seasons here in Oregon require that you should have perfect drainage. Nothing is of more vital importance than the selection of a well-drained lot. Secondly, you should be where you have plenty of fresh air ventilation; to build in the flat and crowded part of the city will prevent you from obtaining the necessary fresh air, which is absolutely needed for your health, especially so for the man or woman who is housed in closed quarters all day in business.

WE OFFER FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION FAIRMOUNT HEIGHTS OR CHULA VISTA PARK

These additions are on the car line, overlooking the city and valley. You can select here the most conspicuous building site to be found in the city at a reasonable cost.

You can get lots one, two or three blocks from car line, and the price we now ask will double in the next two years. Prices now $400, $500, $600 and $800 per lot. You can get easy terms of payment, but we will require that you shall make good improvements when you do improve.

Why not select your lot now and make plans for your home? Plant trees and roses and have them growing. It will give you something to do in your spare moments.

We also want you to see Mathews Park, which is platted in acre lots. They are selling fast, and we do not know of a better opportunity to get a whole acre for the price that you would give for a single city lot.

We have several good farms for sale. Call and see us; let us show you these properties.

THIS IS THE MAN YOU NEED

If the hoofs of your horse need shoeing, I have the metal, the knowledge and the willingness to put your horses right when they need a firm footing. Another thing—you'll find my charges for shoeing about right. If they're not you're welcome to kick harder than your horse does.

EVERYBODY SEEMED TO BE SATISFIED

ficial count made by these disinterested gentlemen, acting as judges, and who have no motive in the contest other than to accept the invitation of the management to make a thorough and complete canvass of the votes. The mere mention of the names of these gentlemen is assurance enough of their integrity. These gentlemen are well known and highly esteemed by their business associates and with all whom they come in contact as thorough and honest business men.

When the announcement of the winners was made shortly after 4 p. m. today, the names of the winners were greeted with approval on all sides. The interest was intense all during the count, and the best feeling prevailed among all those present.

Every ballot voted was carefully scrutinized by the judges and those present expressed themselves as highly pleased with the manner of arriving at the result.

Big Vote Cast

The aggregate vote cast in The Daily Guard contest is the largest ever polled in a similar contest in the city. If not in the whole northwest, and ran high in the millions.

The conditions of the contest were so easy that it proved attractive from the start, votes were not allowed to county auditors, or on large orders of job work or office supplies and printing. Contestants were not asked to compete against any societies, lodges or organizations, such as church or band, entering the name of some popular young lady, and then the organization working for her with the understanding that the prize won should be given to the organization.

No certain candidates were given advance information concerning the contest or allowed to work from three to four weeks, securing subscriptions before the prizes or names of the contestants were announced, as has been the case in some contests.

Realizing that the candidates entered from outside the city of Eugene would have a hard time in competing with the city contestants, the territory covered by The Daily Guard was divided into two districts which assured the different contestants that the prizes would not all be won in the city, which would undoubtedly have been the case if the territory had not been divided. This arrangement proved more than satisfactory as can be seen by comparing the city and the country districts, and before a week had passed—before the first announcement of the votes—thousands of men, women and children in Eugene and the surrounding territory had entered into friendly rivalry, seeking votes for their favorites.

Nip and tuck they fought for two months, each vote adding to the interest to the contest. At no time from the casting of the first ballot was it possible to pick the winners, so close was the battle. From time to time many persons took a guess at the possible winners, but the opinion was hardly expressed before another big batch of votes was recorded and their choice was found among the lower ones. Thus it went throughout the whole contest, first one and then another forging ahead.

But it was just as the manager of the contest expected—the reserve of the various candidates played the most important part, and was the deciding factor in determining the winners.

Everybody Satisfied

That there should be no disappointment, and that the efforts of the willing workers should not go unrewarded, even though their candidates did not win the grand prize, the officials of the contest divided the territory into two districts and offered prizes for the most popular lady of each. This increased the interest in the contest and resulted in satisfaction for everybody, which was the chief desire of The Daily Guard.

Slowly at first the votes began to come in, then increased gradually for a while, until when the workers got thoroughly warmed up they rolled in in such numbers that the totals seemed almost to enormous figures. The friends of the contestants desired to see them win, and insisted on making the fact public by voting for them and getting their friends to do likewise, and the smallest boy or girl was just as powerful as his elders in boosting his favorite candidate. More than one man stole an hour or two from his office at intervals during the contest to make a personal canvass for some friend, and many a dinner dish was left unwashed while the women of the household went calling and incidentally looking for votes.

Winners Feel Proud

The winners may well feel proud of the fact that they have run one race in a thousand and have come out with the deserving honor of having outrun and outlasted workers who have themselves done exceedingly well and would, under ordinary conditions, have had enough votes to win.

The honor attached to winning is considered by some of the candidates as being worth many times the value of the prize itself. Friends of the contestants have boasted them all along the line, and nothing seemed too hard for them to do where a subscription was gotten and the votes given to the favorite. There has been quite an army of fair ladies who have made it their special business during the past few months to early and late exploit the virtue of the paper. In the city and in all directions throughout the country there have been many contestants at all times during the day, afoot, on wheels or on horseback, hunting for some one who looked as though he did not take The Daily Guard, and it may be stated right here that there are but few that have that appearance now.

The contestants have all done splendid work, and some have been more successful than others; but this is due largely to the ability to hustle, possessed by the winning candidates.

All Could Not Win

It is a fact greatly to be deplored that all could not win one of the prizes, but this is impossible, and there is sympathy in plenty for those who have put in days and hours of hard labor and at the end failed to receive a prize for which they have striven; but even then, the work has not all been wasted effort. The honest striving after success, even though the immediate object is not realized, cannot fail to do good. The enthusiasm and energy which was developed is not lost but reacts on one's character, putting iron into the nerve, encouraging one's confidence, stimulating courage and rousing an honest belief in one's ability to undertake and carry to success any task which presents itself. In addition to that, a business experience that she would obtain in no other way.

The Benefits of the Contest

Every candidate, whether she cares to fight the battle of ballots or not, is better able to fight the battle of daily existence today than she was when she entered the contest. Though she may feel the disappointment keenly, she must realize that facing the world does not seem nearly so formidable a proposition as it did a few weeks ago. Those who are successful are deserving of congratulations and praise. They have striven hard and what they have achieved has been largely the result of untiring, unremitting worry. Early and late for nearly two months they have been piling up voting strength a few votes at a time until the ballots amount high up in the thousands. They will appreciate the prizes a thousand-fold more than they would if they had been laid at their feet without any effort on their part, and are better able to appreciate them at something of their own value.

Best of Feeling

During the progress of the entire contest the best of feeling has prevailed and while today's list of winners is quite lengthy, there are many other deserving workers who were not fortunate enough to have their names on the final list, but through their individual efforts have made such a record as to deserve great credit to themselves and the Daily Guard wishes to thank the candidates one and all for their honest effort. Every candidate not winning prizes will receive her check for the commission due on the 5 per cent of total money turned in by them. In this way every candidate will be rewarded in a small way for time spent. The Daily Guard is the first paper to reward the candidates not winning.

Complete Standings Later

Tuesday's Guard will contain the complete standing of all candidates with the complete number of votes obtained.

For Sprains

Sloan's Liniment is the best remedy for sprains and bruises. It quiets the pain at once, and can be applied to the tenderest part without hurting because it doesn't need to be rubbed—all you have to do is to lay it on lightly. It is a powerful preparation and penetrates instantly—relieves any inflammation and congestion, and reduces the swelling.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. L. ROLAND, Bishop of Scranton, Pa. says:—"On the 7th of this present month, as I was leaving the building at noon for lunch, I slipped and fell, spraining my wrist. I returned in the afternoon, and at four o'clock I could not hold a pencil in my hand. I returned home later and purchased a bottle of Sloan's Liniment."

Sloan's Liniment

and used it five or six times before I went to bed, and the next day I was able to go to work and use my hand as usual."

Sloan's Liniment is an excellent antiseptic and germ killer—heals cuts, burns, wounds and contusions, and will draw the poison from sting of poisonous insects.
