PORTLAND MARKET REPORT

Portland, April 28.—Unless Oregon hopgrowers as a whole take steps to improve the quality of their product, they may find the Eastern market closed to them. This is the ultimatum delivered by the Eastern dealers, according to H. L. Hart, a well-known Portland hopman, who has just returned from an extended trip through the Eastern states, where he saw most of the large Eastern dealers and growers.

"The general impression seems to prevail in the Eastern trade," said Mr. Hart, "that the quality of the Oregon crop is deteriorating on account of the carelessness of the growers. Many of the growers with whom I talked told me they believed the Oregon crop was going backward, the same as Washington hops, and that the growers here would soon have to go out of business. It was hard to make them believe that it was only because the yards had been neglected for several years owing to low prices and that the fault was not with the hops."

"If we have a good crop this year, and the growers pick and handle it right, and cure it properly, we can show the East that we can grow as good hops as we ever did, but if Oregon turns out another inferior crop like last year's, the industry in this state will get a black eye it may not recover from. There is not a particle of doubt that Oregon last year lost the sale of practically 10,000 bales in favor of Sacramento, Yolo and Russian River, where they take proper care of their hops. Many big dealers in the East told me that their Oregon business was light this year solely because the growers objected to the quality of the hops."

"Many lots of hops that would otherwise have been good were spoiled after picking was started, hops that would have graded prime being cut down to medium because of the presence of stems and leaves."

"The growers by this time should realize the necessity of spraying hops. The 1909 crop would have been normal in quality if the hops had been properly sprayed, for that would likewise have made both the picking and the curing more satisfactory."

"The Eastern buyers would willingly pay a premium of 2 to 3 cents for Oregon hops over California if the quality of our hops was right. It seems to me that it is up to the growers to do something this year to recover their former reputation for producing superb hops. Otherwise they might as well quit the business."

Wool Situation
Buyers are reducing their bids on wool and the best price offering today for Willamette valley clip is 20c a pound, and it takes something extremely good to bring this figure.

It is stated that owing to the dull feeling in the Boston wool market, at this time, and the greater discrimination between coarse and fine wools, the trade here will follow the same fluctuations as shown in the East.

It has been the custom of buyers of Willamette valley wool here to pay practically the same price for all clips, but so much coarse wool has been taken from the valley during recent years that dealers have decided among themselves to stop the practice.

Will Pay for Quality
Buyers say that this discrimination between fine and coarse wools in the Willamette valley will not operate against producers, because it will pay a man for exactly what he has to offer. Therefore the producer who has fine wools will receive more in proportion to the price than he has received in former seasons because by the old methods dealers were forced to average their bids so that the man who had fine wool received practically nothing more than the man with the poorer grade.

The Willamette valley has been the only section where this practice has been continued in recent years. In Eastern Oregon it has been the custom for many seasons to carefully grade the wools and there has been a differential of fully 8c a pound between the price of fine and coarse wools during recent years.

Warn Against Sisal Twine
Local buyers have again served notice that they will cut 2c a pound off the quotations on wool to those who use their bundles with sisal twine.

The fact that so much loss has resulted to manufacturers during recent years has forced the latter to claim losses from wool sellers wherever sisal threads were shown in the manufactured goods. The presence of sisal is not discovered in many instances until the cloth is manufactured and dyed. Then the sisal threads are found to be improperly dyed.

No change is noted in the mohair situation, and only one firm continues to bid prices.

Chittim Bark Market
There is quite a difference of opinion between dealers as to the standing of the chittim or cascara bark market. Some are of the opinion that nothing over 4 1-2c a pound is available even for old bark, while others assert that 5 cents will be paid for new bark. The season for peeling has just started, and therefore no new bark is offering.

Eggs Are Weaker
The market for eggs is weaker and while no price has been shaded today supplies are not moving off quite so well as expected. Storage operations have been resumed, but the input is not so heavy as expected.

Up Goes Cauliflower
Still another advance is shown in the price of cauliflower along the street today because of the extreme scarcity of the product. Dealers have paid producers as high as $1.10 per dozen for regular run, and this means practically $1.25 for the best quality. Jobbing price for the latter has been advanced to $1.35.

Dressed Meats Trifle Firmer
There was a barely perceptible improvement in the Front street dressed meat trade today, due for the most part to a slight falling off in receipts yesterday and today. Strictly fancy veal washed to be worth up to 10c, while common stuff moved none too readily at 7c up to 9c. Best grade pork was quoted at 13c, ordinary stuff going at 12 to 12 1-2c.

The poultry supply was still short of requirements, and full prices were quoted on hens and chickens. For other lines there was little call.

Butter moved in a satisfactory way at the lower prices effective this week. Cheese was steady and unchanged.

Portland Livestock Market
Portland Union Stockyards, April 27.—The shipment of four loads of cattle from California right into the cattle country—Grass Valley, Or.—is one of those instances which would be hard to explain during normal season, but at present such action was caused by a scarcity here.

Railroad construction work along the Deschutes has called for heavy supplies of cattle, hogs and sheep for the workmen, and practically all the surplus has been cleaned out. Therefore it has become necessary for the cattle section to import supplies from the south in order to fill its wants.

Grass Cattle to Sell Lower
A reduction of about 25c is generally offering for grass cattle in this market, and while some interests say they are still confident of securing former top levels for good quality, the commission trade in general is of the opinion that nothing better than $6.25 is available at this time in the local market. The sales reported at a higher figure were made late yesterday afternoon and the stuff had not been weighed up in time for this report.

The run of cattle today was very light so far as stock for the open market was concerned. The four loads from California for the interior were included among the arrivals pushed.

George W. Ninemeyer, the Aberdeen, Wash., packer, was a visitor in the yards today. Mr. Ninemeyer recently closed up his packing plant because of the scarcity of cattle and stated today that he would return soon. He was looking over market possibilities.

Hogs Are Down Again
Best hogs are quoted in the yards today at $10.25 and it would take something exceptionally good to bring this figure at the moment. Only one head was received in the yards during the past 24 hours, and this sold at $10.10. It weighed 260 pounds.

The market for sheep is quiet and recent sales have been around the general range quoted by this paper. There were arrivals of 117 head during the day, this comparing with none yesterday and 281 head Saturday. A week ago the sheep run was 62 head.

Our $3.00 Shoes For Men

SOME MEN get a first class for $3.00, but don't know any better until they come here and find out

People wonder how we can sell good shoes so cheap. It's simple. The more shoes you make the less the cost; the more you sell the less it costs to sell each pair. The maker sells down the profit per pair, SO DO we and the price of the shoe to you comes down. Nothing is sacrificed. The leather is as good though you pay more, the making is right, so are styles.

NOW SIR---Investigate our $3.00 assertion.
