AMBITION

When I was young I used to dream of scaling all the heights of fame. I said: "I'll make the old world scream when it beholds my wondrous game." And I had visions fair of gold, and princely gems of East and West; for then my heart was young and bold, and raised a rumpus in my breast. I dreamed of ruling hosts of men by virtue of my strength and grace, or, by the movement of my pen, to shake the nation to its base. But now that I am old and fat, and full of prunes and shredded hay, I say to such ambitions: "Scat! I have a better dream this day! Of all gold bricks the worst is fame; it only comes to grieve and vex, to make a man the daily game of album flounders and rubbernecks. If I can do some good today I shall not murmur or repine; if I can help some weary lay whose luck in life is worse than mine, I'll seek my downy couch this night, and my old heart will glow, in truth, with visions far more dazzling bright than all the golden dreams of youth. I tell you this, my friend, again, and you may paste it in your file: This graft of helping fellow men is all that makes our lives worth while."

through the cooking process, and a plate of hot biscuits or a plate of cakes comes to the table as green as the grass of the field.

So far as being nutritious, the alfalfa product has the wheat and corn badly beaten, and experiments show that a man who eats alfalfa product can work longer and harder, experiencing less fatigue than a man who makes a meal out of meat. Then, too, it is a medicine in its way, as it acts upon the nerves, and Omaha doctors have commenced prescribing it as a remedy for insomnia. For the nerves the alfalfa hay comes to the consumer in another form. The blossoms are gathered at a time when they are just in full bloom. Like the hay, they are gathered without moisture, and when bone dry they are ground to fine powder, which is light blue. This powder is made into tablets and constitutes a medicine that, while it will not cure all the ills, will play havoc with insomnia, indigestion and all manner of stomach troubles.

In the death of Harvey W. Scott, editor of the Portland Oregonian, at Baltimore yesterday, the nation loses one of its brainiest men. He was connected with the Oregonian for forty years or more and was a prominent figure in the politics of the state in all that time.

LAST GAME OF BIBLE SCHOOL LEAGUE Will Be Played Tomorrow Evening Between Methodists and Christians

Tomorrow evening on the University campus will be played the championship game of the E. B. S. A. A. The contesting teams are the Methodists and the Christians, each team having won four out of the eight games played. There has been some good ball playing done by the various teams of the league, not professional scores, but scores like 2 to 3, 4 to 3 and 3 to 6. The games have been just as interesting as some professional games we have seen. The game tomorrow evening will be called at 6:15 o'clock, and will be hotly contested from start to finish, and a game which will be well worth while to witness. The batteries of the two teams will be as follows: Christians, Murphy and Robinson; Methodists, Wagers and Russell.

FRENCH STEAMER IN DISTRESS OFF AUSTRALIAN COAST

Sydney, N. S. W., Aug. 8.—The French steamer Salizac is reported in distress 32 miles off Jover's Bay port, 85 miles from Sydney and a steamer was dispatched today to her assistance. The Salizac plies between Mavrilis and Australian ports.

SPOKANE HAS MURDER AND SUICIDE STORY

Spokane, Aug. 8.—Channsey H. Sawyer, president and treasurer of the Washington Furniture Co., was shot and fatally wounded this morning by his landlord, Richard Traut, a candy dealer. Traut then committed suicide. He is reported to have been crazed by an old wound, and formed the idea that Sawyer had ruined his family.

STREET CAR SMASHES INTO LAUNDRY WAGON BUT NO ONE IS HURT

Wheels of Wagon Broken Off and Driver James Harris Thrown to Ground

Another street car accident occurred this morning when a driver tried to cross the car tracks without looking out for the cars. One of the Fisher laundry wagons, driven by James Harris, was wrecked on West Eleventh street beyond Lawrence a little after 8 o'clock, when it was struck by a College Hill loop car. The street car was handled by Motorman R. H. Davis and Conductor G. G. Thorpe. Bystanders who witnessed the accident say that the carmen were not to blame for the affair. It seems that Harris was driving along the north side of the street, and just as the car approached turned to the other side. The motorman shouted and applied the brakes, but the car struck the light wagon just as the rear wheels were in the middle of the track. It lifted the wagon clear of the track, smashing the wheels as though they were made of straw, and left the vehicle upside down in the street. The horse was knocked down and the driver dumped unharmed into the dust. Neither horse nor driver were hurt, but both were badly frightened. A lady standing on the sidewalk had presence of mind enough to catch the bridle of the horse before it ran and further damage from a runaway was averted. It is hard to understand how the accident occurred. The closed-in seat of the driver in this kind of a wagon makes it very difficult to hear from behind and the street cars frequently are bothered where it appears as though the drivers are indifferent of the car's right of way, but they are usually careful. The wheel tracks showed that the turn was very abrupt. The motorman shouted as he saw the horse turn but was unheard by the driver close to stop his car with the hand brakes, with which the new cars are fitted.

STREET CAR RIOTS ARE FEARED TONIGHT WITH TROOPS GONE

Columbus, Aug. 8.—With the departure today of all but one regiment of the 3200 soldiers called here because of the street car strike, and the opening of saloons until 6 o'clock at night, the authorities are apprehensive of rioting tonight.

FAMOUS EDITOR'S BODY SENT HOME

Baltimore, Aug. 8.—The body of Harvey W. Scott, editor of the Portland Oregonian, who died here yesterday following a surgical operation Saturday, will be started for Portland tonight. It will be accompanied by the widow and his son, L. M. Scott.
