THE FIDDLER

They are holding high carnival down at Charlie's grog bazaar, and the boys are burning money where the shining bottles are; you may hear their joyous laughter, you may hear them shout and sing, and they're finding life a solace as the noisy hours take wing. But the morning, O the morning, when the singing rounders wake when the mouth is like a hen's nest, and the head a mass of ache, O the agonies remorseful and the wallings that ascend—for all men must pay the fiddler when the dance is at an end. There are fellows all around us who are cutting quite a swath, thinking that unless they're stylish they are surely in the broth; and they're buying motor wagons, and they're jaunting off to Rome, with a lot of borrowed money, and a mortgage on the home. And some day a beauty panic on the land will spread a pall and lots of stylish fellows will be backed against the wall; then you'll hear a lot of pleading—pleading all in vain my friend, for a man must pay the fiddler when the dance is at an end. Little Cora Jane DeJiggra has her feelings badly miffed, for her mother often tells her that her gait is much too swift. With her swagger girl companions through the streets she likes to roam, and she sees the moving pictures when she ought to be at home; she is flirting with the Johnnies in her harmless, foolish way, and she may meet in sackcloth on some bitter, future day; for the laws that govern mortals never yield and never bend—girls, like boys, must pay the fiddler, when the dance is at an end.

EUGENE AND ITS NEWSPAPERS

The Albany Daily Herald has the following to say of Eugene and its newspapers:

"During the past three or four years no other town on the Pacific coast has grown more rapidly or substantially than the city of Eugene, the beautiful town at the head of the Willamette valley. Five years ago it had scarcely emerged from the "Sleepy Hollow" type of towns, whereas today it is a thriving and most beautiful place of ten to twelve thousand inhabitants. Nor has Eugene stopped growing. Notwithstanding the usual amount of talk of the wise and otherwise, Eugene keeps on improving and development as a modern city. It has had a commercial club, which institution has done splendid work toward a greater Eugene, and has brought a vast number of people from all sections of America to make permanent homes in the University town.

"Besides this campaign, however, there is another and even more potent factor in the building of Eugene and the surrounding country, intangible though it may seem to some and indifferently regarded by others, and that is the work of its two newspapers. Though an ideal little city of twelve thousand population, the seat of the State University, with beautiful scenery and Oregon's best climate, it has but two newspapers, one morning and one evening edition. But these are ample—more are not needed and could not prosper at this time. But these two rank as the best outside of Portland from every standpoint of the modern newspaper. These newspapers have counted for more in Eugene's growth than any other agency. They have both boosted for a greater Eugene and a fuller development of the natural resources of that part of the Willamette valley in every issue. An important feature of this boosting, too, it must be admitted, while enthusiastic, has been faithful and accurate to a marked degree.

"It is often said, and it is almost a truism, that a newspaper is an industrial mirror of the community or the town in which it is published. If the local newspaper is well filled with advertising of merchants, it is a safe guess that the paper is printed in a live and prosperous town, while the reverse is as true. There are, of course, rare exceptions where a gone-to-seed paper is published in a good town, but these few exceptions only go to prove the rule."

DON'T MIND SOUTHERN PACIFIC'S BLUFF

Report comes from the Sinlaw and Coos Bay, through the newspapers of those places, that the Southern Pacific surveyors are going right on with their location of the line down the coast. In brief, they have adopted in its entirety the route of the Lane County Asset Company, except that they make Junction City, instead of Eugene, the starting point at this end.

Nobody for a moment believes that the Harriman interests intend to build this road, but are engaged in diverting attention from the honest efforts of the local company to construct a road to the coast, and, of course, will further attempt to secure conflicting rights-of-way and thus tie up and muddle matters until nobody can make a move toward actual construction. This is in line with the policy of obstruction so long pursued by the S. P. Co. and it will only fool the people of Eugene and Lane county if they want to be humbugged. On the other hand, if they really want a road from Eugene to the coast, they will get back of the Asset Company unanimously and give all the financial and moral assistance in their power. It is the only real hope we have of railroad development for western Lane county.

The crops of 1910 in the United States are estimated to be worth eight and a half billions of dollars. This means an enormous movement of money from the city resident to the farmer. Economists figure on these crops as being great wealth producers. If any large per cent of these crops were to be shipped to foreign countries, the nation would certainly be benefited to the full amount of the value of the shipments; but, if it is all eaten at home, it cannot be said that it is all clear profit. True economy consists in eating only what is unsalable.

All lines of business are reported good in Eugene—an indication of the great growth and prosperity that will come to this city during 1911. Next year is going to be a record-breaker and no mistake.
